NEW DRUGS FOR AIDS ARE SAVING LIVES IN MAINE, BUT TREATING EVERYONE WHO NEEDS THEM WOULD COST MILLIONS. OFFICIALS SAY THEY DON'T HAVE THE MONEY, BUT WITHOUT THE DRUGS PATIENTS KEEP DYING. See page 6.

At left is a month's worth of protease inhibitors. For people with HIV, the drugs might mean the difference between life and death. But at $20,000 a month, it isn't cheap.

What is Portland's Best Kept Secret?

The Spirited Gourmet

Remember those class trips from hell to the museum? Well, Joan Lewis is the tour guide you wish you had back then. When kids take Lewis' tour of the Portland Museum of Art, they can expect a "Where's Waldo?" game with a Romantic painting, fun facts about Portland and tolerance for the pubescent fascination with paintings and sculptures featuring nude women. Lewis has been at the museum since it opened and started volunteering at the McLellan House in 1974. Though meats do add to our fame, sauces, veggies, teas, coffees in sacks. Everything necessary to cook well. Gourmet or casual. Though meats do add to our fame, sauces, veggies, teas, coffees in sacks. Everything necessary to cook well. Gourmet or casual.

Why do you stay?

Mainly, I enjoy it. I enjoy meeting people. I just enjoy working here. But my favorite is the McLellan House and the glass [in the permanent collection]. And I have learned a tremendous amount.

Is there anything the docents don't know?

The docents don't do tours on the glass. They don't understand it. They never had lectures [on the collection]... We [on the glass committee] have chosen two pieces from each case, and we're going to have a special tour so that the docents can talk about them intelligently... So many people come in and want the glass and the docents don't have a clue. It's not good.

Do you like to give tours to kids?

I like the smaller children. I like any age, all the way up, but I think by the time they get to high school, they're either interested or it's not the thing to be interested. It depends on the group. I had a high school class — 11th grade, I think — two years ago from Portland High. They were architecture students who came with their teacher. They were fantastic.

What exhibits fascinate the kiddies?

They really like pointillism. They can understand it. They come up close to look at it and I tell them that to see it you really have to stand back. But I bring them up to show them how the paint is applied. When someone asks you what surrealist artwork means, what do you say?

I don't know. I have no idea. This one's untitled, but if you had to give it a name, what would you call it?

Portland Stage covers landlord’s taxes to let the show go on

BY LAURA OPPERS

When the Portland Stage decided in November to seek a liquor license for the new theater on Commercial Street, the cost included paying $10,000 of the theater’s landlord’s taxes. If the state’s new provision for the Portland Stage to pay the landlord’s taxes had not been included in the deal, the theater might have to change its plans to get the liquor license.

According to Capone’s attorney, Billy Br蟀 , the license fee of $10,000 the Portland Stage was charged is part of the landlord’s taxes. Because the landlord of Portland Stage is nhiễm, the landlord’s taxes must be paid by the theater. If the Portland Stage is found to be in violation of the state’s liquor laws, the landlord would have to pay the taxes on the property.

The Portland Stage is currently seeking a liquor license for the new theater on Commercial Street. If the state’s new provision for the Portland Stage to pay the landlord’s taxes is not included in the deal, the theater might have to change its plans to get the liquor license.

LAURA TEAHAN

Looking at Stan's skeleton-thin body, you might have thought he could have died last year. You'd be wrong. Stan (not his real name) was diagnosed with AIDS last September. Through tests showed the disease was业主的，he's been diluting his body until he can barely contain his body.The body is so thinly stratified by the virus that it can barely sustain itself.

After months of waiting, the new drugs sometimes cause side effects in those who take them. But the benefits outweigh the risks, and people are starting to see the benefits of the new drugs.

Because Medicare is partially funded by the individual states, local governments have been paying the full cost of the new drugs. In Maine, Medicare pays for protease inhibitors for patients who are eligible for Medicare, but patients must pay for their own insulin. In some cases, Medicare will cover only part of the cost of protease inhibitors.

Some states are already moving to place limits on the new treatments. In Maine, the state has limited the number of protease inhibitors that can be prescribed to five per month.

In order to be eligible for protease inhibitors, patients must meet certain criteria. In many cases, patients must be taking protease inhibitors for at least six months, and they must have a viral load of 500 or fewer.

The fact is, Medicaid does cover the cost of the new drugs, but patients must pay for the drugs themselves. Some patients may be able to get help through pharmaceutical companies, but others may not.

Both Fournier and Pickus feel that the new drugs have given patients a new lease on life. "It's like having a new lease on life," said Pickus. "The new drugs are giving patients a new chance to live."

which doesn't pay for the infections, continues it would be $120 million in the hole by March if it offered that amount. Texas is instituting a combi-nated lottery/waiting list for patients who need to keep their kids going to school for the drugs. The first in line is going to cost $100 million, but that's better than nothing. There's not enough money to go around. The situation is critical. I understand why it is for a fine by a fine, but when you think about it, it's the right thing to do. We can't let everybody get AIDS Project said. "It doesn't want to be the person who says 'no' to help them. You've got to come up with $50,000.

Sweat for the lifespan

Most doctors and AIDS workers agree that short-sighted policies are benefits that helped them buy the drugs. They'll try to help them as soon as they can, but they don't know yet whether recovering patients are getting the drugs they need. "This is a long-term battle," said Sachs. "We've got to keep doing something to keep the virus from spreading."

"We've done something else other than just saying goodbye to the last drug, it's to live. And for the government and service organizations, it's going to be cheaper.

"If we're successful, we'll probably make a lot of money - we'll be able to help more people."

"They're thinking two to three years."

Sachs said, "It's important to be realistic about the virus."

"People need to realize they're not saving the world - they're just saving their own damned skins."

The idea of a gay marriage whips some people into a frenzy. They just can’t bear to question one of the pillars of our society. It has forged new alliances between gay men and lesbians.

In the end, we are all paying a fearsome price for the society’s ignorance. Whether the assailant is Rush Limbaugh or Al Diamon, we are all feeding today’s political discourse and political journalism. We are all condoning the policies of either candidate. We are all feeding the behavior of these 2 men.

Makeover madness, or a journey to the heart of the American beauty myth

JOE MILLER

Call me a feminist with a few defilements in her disdain.

It's sad, but true, that women are bombarded by a never-ending barrage of advertisements alluring them to self-improvement. Many women believe that they can improve their human condition by looking more beautiful. The ad world has become a virtual beauty bazaar, selling us everything from skin care creams to plastic surgery. To escape the deluge of ads, I decided to become a contestant in the Superbowl Makeover

I signed up for the PSC's (Public Image Society) makeover contest because I was interested in the idea of improving my physical appearance. I wanted to see if I could make a difference, and I believed that I could. I was confident in my personal style, and I knew that I could improve my appearance. I had been working out for a few months, and I was in great shape. I was proud of myself, and I wanted to continue to improve. I was excited about the prospect of winning the makeover contest and showing my friends and family what I could do.
