A Conversation with Richard Haynes

The Portland Press Herald
You've seen him on Exchange Street, carrying an old-fashioned wooden shoeshine box, making his rounds. His name is Richard Haynes. He's the reason and name he is known as Spats.

Spats has his own shoe shine box, and he is known as Spats.

Doesn't have a spot at One City Center I. had to have a place here but the rent was too high. I'll go back there if they give me more room. For a dancing card for free.

Spats has the energy of a high-per­formance race car sitting at the starting goal.

Dolan's doesn't have a spot at One City Center?

I used to have a place here but the rent was too high. I went back there if they give me more room. For a dancing card for free.

They don't realize that.

So then you started going door to door?

I used to work for the Pimlico Company was the first one to invite me. The rent was too much. Then I went to Blue Town.

I have a regular store. I do the shoeshin­ers. I do the lawyers and the bankers. I go to all the businesses that ask me. I go to

Banks

Shupe's

Lobstein

Richard Lynd and Richard Pabst

I get what I need. I visit my friends.

Richard Lynd: I go to DMSI-shoe shining.

DMSI-shoe shining. I do my work. My DMSI-shoe shining. I go right into the dressing room. I take off their shoes, take them off, and I take them out in the lobby.

And you do all of this without a vehicle?

Every two-week shop is a vehicle. But now I'm going to the Spats-on-Wheels. I'm getting a van.

You are one hard worker. Where did this work ethic come from?

My Dad. He's the one of what I am. He wouldn't let me be lazy. I learned to work.

Stephen: Spats-on-Wheels then I'm going to a Spats-on-Wheels. I'm getting a van.

What else is aboard for Spats?

My next place. After I become Spats-on-Wheels then I'm going to be Spats-Looking- Good. Come spring I'm going to have a new style. Fancy clothes. I'm going to wear my suits on my suit. A button, hat, black and white keepers. I'm going to be Dapper Spats.

DA charged with racism

Colin Hudson, Portland Press Herald's police and court affairs editor, and his attorney, Jon Anderson, fled Maine for Florida last week after the DA asked for a $50,000 bond when Hudson was arrested on a charge of violating the state's civil rights act. The DA alleged that Hudson was an outspoken critic of the police and that his arrest was prompted by a political scandal.

TROUBLE WITH ZAMBONI

By Ken Burn

In November, as the day got warmer, Zamboni walked up to me in the hallway at school and grabbed my arm with his head.

"Hey, pal," he said, squeezing my neck and pressing me with his eyes. "Come on, let's blow this joint. Let's go."

Zamboni was standing at his locker, watching me, shaking his head and pretending not to smile, and Zamboni walked at him too and said, "You coming, girlfriend? Come on, you white woman, you coming, or are you a maid?"

Big Zamboni, with his curly hair, olive skin, green eyes, and dimpled smile was always magnetic, an irresistible sprite, and we followed him down the hall, chuckling to ourselves, right past Ernest Hageman, the principal, who was standing at the front door. Beyond Hageman and the oak-paneled vestibule was an outside light streaming at all directions. We had the right to leave school, so we wasn't too choosy when we went to violins of anything. Hageman watched with suspicious disfavor, but she let us go, and we played hooky from school that day, and after that from work, Zamboni and I from Shop 'n Save, and as far as I know, Gallipoler from cutting

Portland's Pioneering Writing Center:

- Elizabeth Jordan Moore, author of "Cold Water" and Monte Woods, author of "Bone Language" and winner of CBW's Katz Fiction competition. All three agreed that the best stories were distinguished by their unique narrative progression and child descriptions of places and people.

Ken Wood's "Trouble with Zamboni" begins below.

"Strong, clean prose, and a kind of manic and wordy humor that appealed to me," said Wood of this story. "This knowing narrator," agreed Moore, "gives on a very bad day story striking emphasis and strong feeling."

"Lupercali," Anielle Salvato's tale of love and other element behaviors, begins on page 12. "It's a wonderful rendering of Portland nightfall (whether it's true or fake)," commented Moore. "The city seems small and dark and almost desolate, sort of the fifth borough in the 20s, he's succeeded in making Portland seem surreal!"

Zamboni

"I used to live there," said Zamboni, taking a hold of the post at the door of the garage. He went down the old door and picked up the trophy behind the door. Garland tugged at him, and looked at each of the awards hanging on the wall of the garage.

"You used to be a hero," said Garland, as he got straight to business.

"It's true," said Zamboni, as "and that's the end of the story." There was a sniffling sound from the other side of the room, but Zamboni was already on his way out.

"I used to be an orphan," said Zamboni, as "and that's the end of the story." But Garland was still left with a sense of mystery, as if the story was not yet complete.

The old sign of the garage was hanging on the wall, remembering the days of glory when Slide Zamboni was a man of many trophies. Today, the garage was closed, and Zamboni had sold it to a new owner, who was eager to keep the memory of the past alive.

"That arse was twitchy, didn't you think?" Morgan said to Henry as they walked outside the parking lot.

"No," replied Henry, "I thought she was just being quiet." Morgan laughed.

"They're just like that," Morgan said, as they walked towards their car. "I've never seen a girl quite like her before." Henry smiled, as he too realized the uniqueness of the girl they had just met.

"She's a little odd," Morgan said, as they climbed into their car. "But she's got something about her that makes her interesting." Henry nodded, as he agreed with Morgan's observation.

"She's definitely not like the other girls," Morgan said, as they drove away from the parking lot. "I think she's got a lot going for her." Henry smiled, as he thought about the girl they had just met.

"Oh God, I look like this," she moaned.

By pouncing into the mushy window glass Henry was able to make out the faint reflection of a tall, thin man standing near the coffee urn. It was one of her fixations.

"Oh, no, not again."

She took up the half-smoked cigarette from the table and tossed it into the ashtray.

"What is he?" he asked in his cultivated voice of bored derision.

"I don't know, actually. I think he works as a hair stylist somewhere in Freeport. Oh, I know. I'm being should."

"Probably guilty," Henry mused.

"Don't even mention it," Margot said, sitting a little straighter. "I've been observing about this here for years."

"Tell me, tell me," he said, looking back at her from behind his glasses.

"Yeah, right," she lied. "I'm not really a type."

"No, you are."

Suddenly he saw her, the white streaks in her hair standing out like islands of snow from her face. He noticed herúltilean forward, her longish fingers grasped into her pants, and he couldn't imagine what he'd do with such a thing. He saw her frowning, her sullen face, her bare shoulders. She'd wandered in for coffee and eggs, opened the door, snapped back in. "Hey, Henry, that's your man, God. You'll be his biggest fan."

"Okay, you didn't make me a coffee."

"Best thing ever," he said, almost forgetting. "I have a present for you."
Bad habits: breaking the patterns of abuse

The past week in Courser Portland news played like a popular soap opera and Silver Lake is facing a summer of sexual assault allegations. The last three days have been dominated by yet another sexual assault scandal, this time involving a former employee of the city’s Planning and Development Department.

President Portland attorney Peter Murray’s had a reputation for being a tough bedwetter, but that didn’t stop the “Alcoholics Anonymous” group from coming to the rescue. A white man named “Bill,” former Stanley employee at a local furniture storeholder in Old Port, Maine, is the latest in a long line of sexual assault allegations.

And we know lots of women never report these types of crimes because they are afraid to. Women have sex with men for all kinds of reasons, but they don’t want to be labeled as weak. This is why I believe we need to change the way we think about these issues.

To this end, I encourage all men to be more open about their experiences and to support the women around them who may be struggling with similar issues.

Thank you for this opportunity to speak out on this important matter.

Good-bye to 20th Century

Fred Rogers, the creator of “Mister Rogers’ Neighborhood,” died on 1907, the same year he was born. His legacy lives on through his television show, which has touched millions of lives.

Rogers was known for his gentle manner and his ability to make complex ideas accessible to young children. He often used his own experiences to teach important lessons about life, love, and forgiveness.

In his final season, Rogers addressed the issues of death and violence in his children’s world. He spoke about the pain and sadness that come with loss, and he offered words of comfort and hope.

Rogers’ message of love and understanding continues to inspire people of all ages, and his legacy will live on through the generations.

Thank you for this opportunity to speak out on this important matter.

The Baltimore Waltz - A moving and inspiring piece of theatre.

Don't miss the season's finest professional theater at PORTLAND STAGE COMPANY.

Now through Feb. 21, The Baltimore Waltz by Paula Vogel directed by Greg Searing.

Vogel's brother Carl invited her to a pre-performance party for the first time. Later, on her way home, she saw a sign for the Baltimore Waltz.

In 1986, Vogel's brother Carl invited her to a pre-performance party for the first time. Later, on her way home, she saw a sign for the Baltimore Waltz. Vogel, a self-described 'nondruggie,' decided to buy a ticket.

The play is set in Baltimore, Md., where Carl Vogel is dying of AIDS. When he died, she imagined what her brother's world might have been like. The result is "The Baltimore Waltz.""}

World's Gym: A World of Difference

You may think that all those centers are the same. The same equipment, the same atmosphere and the same deals. But you'll find a world of difference at World Gym. World Gym Portland is run by people who know what quality is and they demand it for the members.

The members own the gym.

They know that the impeccable quality of World Gym is only as good as the service that comes with it. At World Gym you pay one price for a membership—none extra are included and there are no hidden fees. You love to work out, but you don't live to work out, and World Gym understands that.

World Gym is the only fitness center open 24 hours a day, Monday through Friday along with great weekend hours.

You can hit a workout into any schedule! With 26 different spacious classes available for any level, free baby-sitting and a free courtesy phone to check your messages there is no place as convenient as World Gym. This is simply the most spacious, organized and cleanest fitness facility in the area.

At World Gym we take you seriously.

BOOK of LOVE

A Casco Bay Weekly Advertising Supplement February 11, 1993

Aunt Edna's Valentine's Day flowers: The chrysanthemum, the rose, the lily, the sweet pepper, the buttercup, and the pansy. Here are a few of our favorite Valentine's Day flowers and arrangements.

Valentine's Day is a time to express love and affection. It's a day to show someone special how much you care about them. Whether it's a gift, a card, or a romantic gesture, Valentine's Day is a special occasion to share love and happiness.

Valentine's Day Gift Ideas:

1. CANDIES: Chocolate-covered strawberries, truffles, and chocolates in heart shapes are classic Valentine's Day gifts.
2. FLOWERS: Roses, tulips, and lilacs are traditional Valentine's Day flowers.
3. ROSES: Long-stemmed and short-stemmed roses are available in various colors, including red, pink, and white.
4. ARRANGEMENTS: Valentine's Day floral arrangements can be beautiful and thoughtful gifts.

Valentine's Day Quotes:

"I love you more than words can express." - Unknown

"Valentine's Day is a day to show someone special how much you care about them." - Pamela

"Happy Valentine's Day!" - A.F.P.I

"I just wanted to tell you how much I love you." - Dan

"You are my Valentine." - Becky

"I love you more than words can express." - Sara

"Valentine's Day is a day to celebrate love and the special people in our lives." - Pamela

"I love you to the moon and back." - Jennifer

When You Think of Valentine's Day, Think of ME.

Pick up some fragrant Calico Crackle Soaps, warm Acorn slippers-sacks or an embroidered canvas bag for your special Valentine.

Don't bore her (or him) with candy this year! You're both dieting, anyway. Give a gift from the heart- from ME.

Sweep her off her feet... with gifts of love from Amaryllis!

Happy St. Valentine's Day!

LAURIE, THIS WEEKEND I will ask you to be my wife. You have become the most important part of me so quickly, yet I'm so sure of myself. You are the truest form of a loving person, this, by the way, you make me feel. You are my best friend. I love you... and... will you marry me? -Steven HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY, BILL and thank you Casco Bay Weekly for the Personal section. I can't believe we met through the personals in CBW just 3 1/2 months ago and are now planning a wedding in September! All my love, Sharon

WOMEN OF ALL THE PEOPLE IN THE WORLD, YOU'RE THE BEST. I COULDN'T HAVE BEEN HAPPIER WITH THE LADY OF MY DREAMS. WHEN WE DO finally marry and you are the matron of honor, I will raise a toast to you. With love,

MOM

POKEY, CBW brought us together 17 months ago and now we can begin to celebrate our first Valentine's Day as husband and wife on these same pages. We so often say our first date has never ended so let's celebrate that September Valentine's Day with a second date this weekend. Dinner, dancing, champagne...I love you! Bo.

The weather was on our side all morning. It had to be done. The sun was shining, the sky was bright. Happy Valentine’s Day!

PARKER’S

Happy Valentine’s Day Upline, We met through CBW personalities and from day one you brought me a many of smiles. Now that we’ve decided to go our separate ways, I’ve been realizing something very important to me - I need your smiles and I would like them to be permanent, so... will you marry me? I love you, XO Your Downline
