What's red and white, six feet tall, romes with a box and won't leave your porch until you pay what you owe?

No, it's not the IRS. It's your local pizza delivery person.

At first glance, the whole business of delivering pizzas seems pretty silly. After all, isn't every pizza worth eating worth the walk to your pizza joint? No, say the market research experts, who now believe that "homeless" delivery drivers have to be "just a convenience for those lacking the initiative to lift themselves off the couch. In the '90s, home delivery is an important marketing trend. And in Greater Portland, pizza is the market leader. These are the individuals who will deliver a hot pie to your living room. Alas, together they deliver, by conservative estimates, 117,000 pizzas a year. To what end step on occasion Portlanders, but being an entrepreneurial person can be difficult. It's no cakewalk, delivering pizzas. The hours run late, the streets turn mean and the customers can get ugly. Local pizza drivers will stories about being ridiculed, harassed, spat upon, chased from neighborhoods, propositioned by naked women and lonely men, robbed at gunpoint and beaten with baseball bats. Local lawmakers flex anti-war muscles

GEORGE Bush isn’t getting much support from Maine’s House of Representatives for his efforts to win the hearts and minds of the American people. At the insistence of a host of Portland-area Democratic leaders, the House yesterday passed a resolution praising the president for his recent tour of the country. The resolution, which was introduced by Rep. Donald L. Mounsey, was widely seen as a misstep by the Bush administration.

Mounsey said the resolution was introduced to counteract the anti-war sentiment that has been spreading across the state. "We need to show our support for the president and his efforts to win the hearts and minds of the American people," Mounsey said. "The people of Maine are behind him and we need to show that clearly in the House."

But anti-war Democrats were not impressed. "This is a bad move," said Rep. John A. Gist, a member of the House’s foreign affairs committee. "We need to show our support for the president, but this resolution is just a姿态."

The resolution passed by a vote of 76-35, with all but a handful of Republicans voting in favor. The anti-war Democrats were joined in their opposition by a number of moderate Republicans who felt the resolution was too strong.

But the resolution was not the only anti-war activity in the House yesterday. At a hearing on the war, Rep. Thomas J. Ryan introduced a bill that would establish a commission to investigate the causes of the war. The commission would be composed of five members, including two anti-war Democrats and three anti-war Republicans. The commission would have the power to subpoena witnesses and documents, and its findings would be presented to the House for consideration.

The bill passed by a vote of 83-24, with the anti-war Democrats and a handful of moderate Republicans voting in favor. The bill now goes to the Senate, where it is expected to face more resistance from Republican leaders.

In other news, the House also passed a resolution expressing its support for the families of American soldiers who have died in the war. The resolution was introduced by Rep. John A. Gist and passed by a vote of 114-1, with all members of the Republican Party voting in favor and all but a handful of Democrats voting against.

The resolution was hailed by many as a move to show support for the families of the fallen. "This is an important step in showing our support for the families of our troops," said Rep. John A. Gist. "We need to show our support for the families of our soldiers and this resolution is a step in the right direction."

Teddy's Lees, a seafood restaurant in Portland, is facing a lawsuit from a competitor for alleged trademark infringement. The lawsuit claims that Teddy's has misused trade secrets and proprietary information.

Legal experts say the case could set important precedents for the food industry, particularly for small businesses that may face challenges in protecting their intellectual property.

"This is a significant case," said John Doe, a food industry attorney. "Teddy's Lees has been accused of using trade secrets that were developed by another company. If the court rules in favor of the plaintiff, it could have widespread implications for the way restaurants and other businesses protect their intellectual property.

Teddy's Lees denies the allegations and is actively fighting the suit. The company's lawyer, Jane Smith, said, "We are confident in our defense and believe that we have acted within the bounds of fair competition."

The case is expected to go to trial later this year, and both parties are preparing extensively for court proceedings.

Transportation Update:

The Portland Metropolitan Council of Governments (PDC) has approved $500 million for a new commuter rail service to Maine. The service, to be known as "Port Rail," is scheduled to begin operating in April 2023, providing the first rail service to Maine in over 50 years.

"This is a historic moment for Portland and Maine," said Mayor Edwin, the city's mayor. "For too long, we've been dependent on outdated infrastructure and limited transportation options. With Port Rail, we're taking a significant step forward in addressing these needs.

The rail service will connect Portland with several destinations in Maine, including Augusta, Bangor, and Lewiston. It is expected to reduce travel times, attract new businesses, and boost the local economy.

Construction is expected to begin immediately, with a target completion date of December 2023. The project is estimated to create 8,000 jobs and generate $1 billion in economic activity.

Greenhouse Gas Emissions

A new study has found that greenhouse gas emissions from transportation are projected to increase by 30% over the next decade. The study, conducted by the National Transportation Research Board (NTRB), warns that without significant changes, the transportation sector will fail to meet its climate goals.

"Transportation is a major contributor to climate change," said Dr. John Doe, a researcher at the NTRB. "We must take bold action to reduce emissions and transition to cleaner alternatives."

The study recommends a comprehensive approach that includes investing in public transit, electric vehicles, and alternative fuel technologies. It also calls for improving transportation efficiency and promoting a shift to more sustainable modes of travel.

Economic Development

The Portland Economic Development Corporation (PEDC) has released its annual report, highlighting the city's economic growth and key achievements.

According to the report, Portland's economy grew by 5% in 2022, with a strong focus on innovation and technology. The city's startup ecosystem has doubled in size in the past five years, attracting new businesses and talent.

"Portland is a city of innovation," said Mayor Edwin. "We are proud to see our city's economy continue to thrive and attract top talent.

The report also notes the city's commitment to sustainability, with a goal of becoming carbon neutral by 2040. It highlights initiatives such as the recent implementation of a city-wide recycling program and the expansion of electric vehicle charging stations.

Arts and Culture

The Portland Art Museum has announced its lineup for the upcoming season, featuring a diverse range of exhibits and events.

One highlight is the "Impressionist Gems" exhibition, showcasing the works of renowned artists like Monet and Van Gogh. The exhibit runs from May 1 to September 30 and will attract visitors from around the country.

"We are excited to bring these stunning works to Portland," said Dr. Jane Doe, the museum's director. "These pieces are a testament to the talent and innovation of the Impressionist movement.

Other featured events include a series of lectures by renowned scholars and a music festival celebrating the city's rich cultural heritage.

Education

The Portland Public Schools have released their annual report, emphasizing the city's commitment to providing high-quality education for all students.

The report highlights the district's progress in improving student outcomes, with an increase in graduation rates and a decrease in disciplinary incidents.

"Our goal is to provide every student with the tools they need to succeed," said Superintendent Jane Doe. "We are proud of the work we've done and look forward to continued improvement.

The report also outlines the district's efforts to address equity and access, including the implementation of a new anti-harassment policy and the expansion of diverse learning opportunities.

Community Events

The Portland Regional Chamber of Commerce is hosting its annual Business Expo on May 15th, featuring a keynote address by bestselling author Jane Doe. The event is expected to draw thousands of attendees, showcasing the city's business community and highlighting economic opportunities.

"We are excited to bring together leaders from all sectors," said Chamber President John Doe. "The Expo is a great opportunity to network and learn about the latest trends in the economy.

In addition to the Expo, the chamber is hosting a series of workshops and networking events throughout the year, aimed at helping businesses grow and thrive.

Environmental Initiatives

The Portland Energy Commission has launched a new program aimed at reducing greenhouse gas emissions from the city's energy sector.

The "Green Energy Challenge" encourages businesses and residents to switch to renewable energy sources, with incentives for those who make the switch.

"We believe that every action counts," said Commissioner Jane Doe. "By switching to renewable energy, we can make a significant impact on the environment.

The program includes a variety of resources and tools to help individuals and businesses make the transition to renewable energy, including information on available rebates and grants.

Public Safety

The Portland Police Department has launched a new initiative to improve community engagement and trust.

The "Police-Community Partnership" program brings together law enforcement and community members to address local issues and promote a culture of collaboration.

"We are committed to building a stronger, safer community," said Chief John Doe. "Through this partnership, we hope to create a safer environment for all residents.

The program includes regular meetings, community events, and a dedicated hotline for residents to report concerns and provide feedback.

Healthcare

The Portland Hospital Foundation has announced a major donation to support the city's hospital system.

A $10 million gift from the Portland Foundation will be used to expand the hospital's emergency department and upgrade critical care facilities.

"This is a momentous occasion," said Dr. Jane Doe, the hospital's CEO. "We are grateful for the support of our community and look forward to providing even better care for our patients.

The foundation has a long history of supporting the hospital and has a goal of raising $50 million over the next five years to support critical infrastructure needs.

Technology

The Portland Technology Council has released its annual report, highlighting the city's growth in the technology sector.

Portland has emerged as a tech hub, with a rapidly growing startup ecosystem and major players like Nike, Intel, and HubSpot.

"Portland is a tech-friendly city," said CEO Jane Doe. "We are proud to be home to some of the world's most innovative companies.

The report outlines the city's efforts to attract more tech talent and investment, with initiatives such as the "Tech Talent Accelerator" program and the "TechHive" community center.

Sports and Recreation

The Portland Sports Commission has announced a new partnership with a national youth sports organization to bring a new youth soccer league to the city.

The "Portland Youth Soccer League" will provide opportunities for children of all ages to participate in the sport, with programs tailored to different skill levels.

"We are excited to bring this new league to Portland," said Commissioner Jane Doe. "It is our goal to provide every child with the opportunity to play soccer and foster a love for the game.

The league will begin in the fall of 2023 and will be open to all children in the Portland region.

The Domino Theory

In the geopolitical world, the Domino Theory was used to mean that if one country fell to communism, sooner or later they all would. In pizza circles it is used to mean that if one house on your street has a delivery leader, sooner or later they all would.

Thirty years ago, Tom Monaghan was hired in college as a pizza delivery boy. Originally he called it "Dominick's." Eventually the brand is marketed simpliciter as the name and the to their famous one-dominant dot combination. For the longer time there was no competition. Domino's was the ABA of pizza delivery—at the beatenness downturn.

Now, at 37 years age, Monaghan's managing salaried Portland, has delivered for two years. In a way, "we are very important to give in that professional look and respect. We have a real reputation. In a foreign country, you can always be courteous, maintain the money well, and on the lookout for developing situations. Quality and quantity of pizza are key. People love us and trust to handle a lot of events like a graduate or special party."

Bill, a 35-year-old manager in South Portland, now equally shares set corporative, setting. "Basically, the customer is always right. Customer service means good business. For 1 1/2 years I have had our service in the past, always made a certain spacial way of some sort. Our drivers have officer insurance and work hard to make a good thing."

The traffic of two cities

It is days and weeks ahead, the cities of Portland and South Portland will each review important aspects of their respective downtown plans. But as you listen to the well-rolled plans of these twin cities, you will hear the sound of a hand clapping.

"The Parkside Neighborhood, which sits between Longfellow Square and Congress Street, has been the heart of the same traffic that plagues South Portland's Knightale's, to move the city to Casco Bay Arts, the operator of the Parkside Neighborhood Association. "Traffic is a common concern," said Parkside resident, "People complain about the noise, the pollution, the density of life at the Parkside Neighborhood.""

But while South Portland planners and consultants spend years working to resolve their traffic problem, their downtown counterparts in Portland only see it as one of many more pressing issues that threaten to overwhelm the entire community.

Meanwhile, the city of Portland is also considering aspects of its transportation and downtown plan, which will not only affect the two cities, but also the people who live in them.

An open letter to George Mitchell

Dear Senator Mitchell,

I believe this is the reason why our country is in the mess it is in today. It is because of the lack of proper leaders who are not willing to listen to the people's desires.

One thing that I hope you will consider is the importance of environmental conservation. We need leaders who are willing to take the necessary steps to protect our natural resources and ensure a sustainable future for all.

In conclusion, I urge you to reconsider your actions and make decisions that will benefit the people of our country. Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely, [Your Name]

DIETS DON'T WORK

Dieting doesn't work for many women because food is a powerful substance often used to satisfy important emotional needs. Make sure you eat well.

CRITICAL KEYS TO WEIGHT LOSS

- Accept yourself irrespective of your weight. Understand that you can't control your weight.
- Recognize the difference between biological hunger and emotional hunger. In other words, don't let your emotions drive your food consumption.
- Satisfy your emotional needs. Without food, you cannot satisfy your emotional needs.

FOCUS

The focus of our small weekly therapy group is to examine the emotional/psychological components of weight loss.

FACILITATOR

Maryann Walshe, N.M.S, N.M.L., specializes in women's issues, eating disorders, anxiety, and depression. She is a licensed social worker with expertise in communication skills, understandings relating to the development of intimacy.
