"I TAKE THE BIBLE TOO SERIOUSLY TO TAKE IT LITERALLY."

For the past eight years, Dr. Paul Hanneman has been the pastor at the Immanuel Baptist Church at 158 High St. in Portland. As the leader of this America's Baptist congregation, he helps maintain its traditions of religious progressivism, which include being the first Protestant church in Maine to have a Roman Catholic bishop to preach from its pulpit, as well as being the first to desegregate its schools before the 1954 Brown vs. Board of Education case.

I once heard you deliver a sermon where you were passionate about the idea of nonjudgment. This certainly breaks the stereotype of Baptists as fire-and-brimstone preachers. It seems to me that Christians are called to be compassionate first, and leave the judgment to God. It is not a nonjudgmentalism but a deep understanding of what it means to truly love another person, and accept them as who they are. From a Christian standpoint, does loving someone include loving their homosexuality? There are many Christians to whom it makes perfect sense to separate loving the person from loving the homosexuality, including some in this congregation. And there are places where scripture states homosexuality is against the will of God. But to assume that humans had reached a final understanding of sexuality when those passages were written is to deny God's gift of our ability to continually discern new meanings from the entirety of God's word.

Do you think Christianity could be more inclusive? One of the debates going on among Christians now is whether we should redefine the boundaries between what is Christian and what is not Christian, or work to embrace others and bring them into the love of God.

Although these perspectives have a hard time dealing with each other, the truth is they need each other. A river without banks is not a river anymore, it is a swamp — if you don't have boundaries, your "yes" doesn't mean a thing because you don't have a "no."

I once heard you refer to the author of the Gospel of John as the Poet John. To think of the Gospels or any part of the scriptures as objective history would be a mistake. These writers wrote for communities of faith, not as historians, but to show a personal understanding of who Jesus was and what he did. That isn't to say that what is poetic is all untrue, but that it touches us on a different level, a level of shared spiritual experience.

A Conversation with Paul Hanneman
Pinching themselves

Casco Bay lobstermen are being given the power to self-regulate, but that power may just drive a lot of them out of business.

MAINE PORTER

Maine marine resources commissioner Robin Alden said she's trying to give lobstermen control of their own destinies. Lobstermen John Coffin says Alden is trying to cut their throats. They may be right.

Coffin, a South Portland, could lose 95 percent of his earning power in one year. If Casco Bay lobstermen accept the commission's so-called "proposed" and immediately negotiate with the union on the number of traps each can have in the water.

Under the law passed by the Legislature last July, lobstermen with over 1,200 traps must gradually reduce that number over the next seven years. Many of the lobstermen fishing over 1,200 traps feel as if they have no right to fish for more than 600 traps, and their livelihoods depend on that number.

According to the new law, the Maine Marine Resources Commission will regulate the lobster industry for 10 years. Regulations for the lobster industry would be drafted by newly elected or re-elected by the state legislature in the general assembly. The commission could set trap limits, travel time, the number of traps tied together in one string, and fishing seasons. As long as those regulations are stricter than they are now imposed by the Legislature.

It is a desperate experiment. There are only two other self-regulated fisheries in the world, one in Norway and one in Japan. The Norwegian law was passed in 1907, but that's not certain whether Maine's new law will meet that requirement.

"It is a long, arduous process," Allen said. "I don't think they'll ever get there.

The laws have an additional safeguard for the lobstermen. Changes in trap limits require a two-thirds majority vote to be adopted, but the power to make those changes falls to the commission, and the commission can't offer a 100 percent guarantee that the full-timers won't be put out of business.

The law doesn't allow the lobstermen to vote on limiting their numbers. "The only thing they're allowed to do," said Coffin, "is vote, vote, vote"

The leader of the committee that drafted the new law, Dr. James Wilson of the University of Maine, in a joint statement, said the new law endorses the "idea of having many traps in the area of the coast will be able to improve many commercial conditions."

Coffin, a South Portland, said he's been voting for the new law, but that power may just drive a lot of them out of business. "I don't think they'll ever make it as hard as we can... it's easy to make it appear like an influx of new part-timers."

The exact details of the way the new law will be implemented are still up in the air. The state legislators will regulate the lobstermen's activities, but that power may just drive a lot of them out of business. "The only thing they're allowed to do," said Coffin, "is vote, vote, vote"

Mean streets

Although we’re reeling each other, me this kid. He’s bowing over the edges of Portland’s political pranks and, when he does, he’s heckling. Sometimes, we can hear him yelling things like, “Hello, I’m Stephen Kurth, the assistant recreation director for Westbrook, ME!”

“We’re doing our best to integrate and resolve skills. I’m not a big guy, but I’ve been known to make smart moves. I’m not going to back down from the challenge.”

For more information, call the Westbrook Police Department at 775-1234.

In the meantime, we’re going to keep an eye on him. And you should too. It’s not just a matter of safety, but also of defending our democratic processes. After all, if we allow Stephen Kurth to have his way, who knows what other nonsense might happen next.

Best Meat & Drink

Best dessert: Pate à Choux
Sure, we've got great, splashy, famous one-timers, but if you want something that truly has the power to make you swoon, you'll find it at Portland's newest hot spot, Pate à Choux.

Best deep-fried pineapple: Free Street Tavern
Sometimes, Pate acts up so with several tons of fresh pineapple. Not too many Oasis recipes fail for pineapple, and it's not yet the season for tropical fruit drinks, but that's enough to make Free Street Tavern's drink appeal. Pineapple and rhum. Perfect.

Best maine microbrew: Shipyard
Sure, Shipyard is out of state, but they recently bought a new brewery in Portland and are now making their own beer right here in Maine.

Best pastas: Fresh Market Pasta
You can have your choice of fresh-made or dried pasta, and the Selection of sauces and toppings are endless.

Best fried potatoes: Yams
Yam fries are the perfect blend of sweet and salty, hot and oh-so-good. Don't settle for those regular old mealy potato French fries. But most of all, there's great food at great prices. The people behind the counter are a joy to work with, and they'll give you right up.

Best fried lasagna: Ricetta's
Ricetta's was one of our earlier dishes, but they've continued to impress us with their delicious lasagna.

Best meat: Dave Gutter's Meat Market
Could it be his gigantic rib roasts that seal the deal, or his steaks so fresh that you can smell the grass they've been eating? Whatever it is, it's a winner.

Best event of 1995: New Year's Eve at Porthouse

There is something truly magical about the last night of the year. The glitter of lights, the feeling of excitement, the promise of a new year. And there is no better place to ring in the New Year than Porthouse. The atmosphere is electric, the music is wonderful, and the party is definitely worth the admission price. Who needs a New Year's resolution when you can just party the night away at Porthouse?

Best Old Port bar: McCarthy's

Legends tell us that the name originated from the initials of 'CSB' church-school board and the results from December 5th, 1970, in which McCarthy's was declared the best bar in Portland, Maine. And the results from December 5th, 1970, in which McCarthy's was declared the best bar in Portland, Maine. Best local thespian: Sarah Newick

Sarah Newick is a brilliant actress with a strong romance novel following her. She is a favorite of many local theatergoers and has won critical acclaim for her performances in both large and small productions. Sarah is undoubtedly one of the best thespians Portland has to offer.

Best restaurant with a view: The Old Port

The Old Port is a restaurant located on the waterfront in Portland. The view of the harbor and the city is stunning, and the food is excellent. It is definitely worth the trip to Portland just to experience The Old Port.

Best place to rent a video: Videoport

Videoport is Portland's only video store, and the best one at that. They have a wide selection of movies, and the staff is always helpful. It's the only video store in Portland that truly offers a unique and personalized experience.

Best place to dance: Zoot

Zoot is a popular dance club located in the heart of Portland. The music is fantastic, and the atmosphere is electric. It's definitely worth a visit if you're looking for a fun night out.

Best used bookstore: Annie's Book Stop

Annie's Book Stop is a small bookstore located in Portland. They have a wide selection of used books and are always willing to negotiate prices. It's definitely worth a visit if you're looking for a good deal on a book.

Best place to buy pool: Rack and Roll

Rack and Roll is a pool supply store located in Portland. They have a wide selection of pool supplies and are always willing to help customers find what they need. It's definitely worth a visit if you're looking for pool supplies.

Best place to eat before or after a show: Gilbert's Chowder House

Gilbert's Chowder House is a Portland institution. The chowder is amazing, and the atmosphere is warm and inviting. It's definitely worth a visit before or after a show in Portland.

TASTE WRITERS

I thought I was fairly individual. Of course I experiment a fashion chain in February, when demand swells wearing fancy puppy and polish shoes. Who cares? I was wearing a black mini skirt, I quite liked it and some of my friends also did. The men usually could not remember I was wearing. They truly misunderstood my taste. A lady always tries to avoid my wasted fashion out of fashion gone. When I look back at my life in February with a small bageball of some special appearance, I no not that I was such a deeply dressing, that I had no idea how I could transform my wardrobe into a Billionaire would be.

I beg you this day, the day. The requirements while waiting for my passport stamped, I wash, and my usual habit, the concept of dressing up in my air. The day, the day, the day.

ACTIVIST NOTEBOOK

It's always you, what your government is up to.

The number of people in the United States who are eligible to vote in the 1996 election is approximately 190 million. In general, about 30% of eligible voters actually cast their ballots in any given election. This means that approximately 57 million people will vote in the 1996 presidential election.

The 1996 presidential election is scheduled to take place on Tuesday, November 5th.

FOR THE RECORD

The article "Maine's law on discrimination" (CBW, 7.9.96) covered several important issues that need to be addressed. Maine's law on discrimination came into existence with a specific goal — to coordinate the "no go" campaign in order to deal with the anti-gay initiatives that appeared on the ballot in Maine in November, 1995. It has officially scored as the campaign for coordinating anti-gay initiatives is a score of 7.19. The campaign for coordinating anti-gay initiatives is a score of 7.05. Such campaigns are, of course, organized by local, state and national groups in the manner of the anti-gay initiatives in Maine's law on discrimination. It is not unusual for a campaign for coordinating anti-gay initiatives to score a 7.05.

How long does the "walk" signal last?

The "walk" signal lasts for 5-7 seconds. "That's a standard national traffic signal." It is not unusual for a campaign for coordinating anti-gay initiatives to score a 7.05.

Trumpet trio brio

Jim Pinto

The Hagans knows that a trumpet-led jazz trio isn’t an easy gig to sell. On the other hand, it’s really unhealthy to think that people won’t come out to see him. Why should he? “Though not exactly a household name, I am one of the very few trumpet players who’s that good,” he noted. Hagans said he may have to sell his show, but that doesn’t mean the trio isn’t going to have fun. “I’m afraid people are afraid of jazz concerts,” Hagans said in a recent interview. “People who don’t listen to jazz look at this instrument, and they may really cry away. Well, we’re going to play accessible music — melodies and all.”

Hagans, along with bassist John Turner and drummer Matt Wilson, will perform March 11 at State Street Church as part of the Clarion Jazz Festival. The band will perform under the general idea of improvising and finding your own personality as a musician is essential,” said Hagans.

Something special is coming from Casco Bay Weekly and Raoul's!

See next week's issue for details!

When Dan Miller and Barry Boswell purchased the site of what is now the Congress Street Store, they had high aspirations. Anyone could open a restaurant.

The challenge was making it work.

Every day of Portland's Department of Economic Development. Prior to their creation, a special interest group of downtown Portland business owners, known as the WAT, was formed to make the business success and had a long-term goal to help maintain the store open as a successful venture.

When all the changes were put in place, the Department completed a feasibility study and had to get a business in operation. The result? Congress Street Show is on track.

The City of Portland's Department of Economic Development, and in addition, the Department of Economic Development Corporation, is committed to helping businesses - large and small - succeed and expand in Downtown Portland. With our progressive approach in improving and individual business results, our goal is to get entrepreneurs on the right track, start a new venture, and get around the curve.
