A conversation with Chan Bearce

Chan Bearce is the head pro at Tennis of Maine in Falmouth and tennis director at the Portland Country Club. Fifty years old, Bearce is ranked number two in Maine in both singles and doubles in the 45-plus age group. He’s also among the top 10 players in his age group in New England.

Bearce says that people often tell him what a lucky guy he is. He is the first to agree with them.

How did you get interested in tennis?
When I was a kid I had a summer job washing dishes at Trip Lake Camp in Poland, Maine. It was the happiest time of my life. It was like the Lourdes of girls camps - an exclusive place and very tennis-oriented. One year they brought the tennis pros over from France. In between meals, during my hours off, he’d be looking for someone to serve. He didn’t care if anyone returned the serve. He just wanted a body to stand on the line so he could serve to it. If you got one, he’d say, "Bearce, get over there." He’d put a spin on the ball and it would hit me in the chest. Then there was his speed variable and his serve would hit me in the head. I was shocked but I wasn’t scared. And finally - watching this guy - I was hooked.

Does anyone ever ask you, "So, have you ever had a real job?"
Oh, I’ve had a couple. I taught American government and civics at Edward Little High School for five years.

Has teaching tennis dampened your enjoyment of the game?
I really have to say, I don’t think it has. Otherwise I would have burnt out years ago. Teaching is one area. Playing tennis for myself is still an escape.

Any words of wisdom for the aspiring player?
Don’t take yourself too seriously. You do anything better if you’re relaxed.

What are you going to do when you retire?
I’ll just play a little tennis and play a little golf. I’ll cut my hours back. Teaching tennis is an ideal retirement occupation.

Nicholas Portland increased its toxic releases and jumped from the fourth to the second largest polluter in Cumberland County. Nichols — an auto-parts manufacturer that recycles metal to make automobile parts — contributed the lion's share of all toxic releases.

The company's releases include 10,000 pounds of trichloroethylene, a cancer-causing agent, and 2,500 pounds of hexavalent chromium, a known carcinogen. The releases come from the company's own reports and were released April 14 with the Environmental Protection Agency's annual Toxics Release Inventory.

In 1996, the year before Nichol's reported its largest releases, it released 100,000 pounds of trichloroethylene and 2,000 pounds of hexavalent chromium.

With 1.4 million pounds of toxic chemicals released into the air and 1.5 million pounds of toxic chemicals released into nearby bodies of water, Nichol's is one of the largest polluters in the state.

The company has been subject to numerous fines and penalties for violating environmental regulations, including a $5 million fine for violations in 1996.

Two killers pit bull puppies were destroyed after they attacked another dog in Windham, but their owners refused to let police put down a third pit bull involved in the attack. Jeff McHugh, owner of the two-month-old female pitbulls that were destroyed at the Animal Refuge League in Woodstock on April 17, admitted the dogs were aggressive. On April 15, the two dogs tore at the back legs of a husky Malamute, then turned on a man who tried to stop the attack by striking the puppies with a walking stick.

The husky's injuries were "horrific," said animal shelter administrator Joan Douglas. The dog was euthanized at the end of the day.

Police saved two lives in a dramatic rescue on April 18 when a man was attacked by a pit bull while walking his dog. The police officer immediately shot the dog, saving the man's life.

Train service to Portland will be late. The state has yet to give Guilford Transportation the green light to start upgrading the 78-mile track that will run from Portland to the Amtrak system. City and state officials had predicted the train would enter service by fall. But according to Citibank, a project that would cost $35 million and take about a year is under way, assuming the train will arrive until sometime in 1996.

"I don't think the city has been as forthcoming as it should have been," said Campbell, the state transportation official. "If the city had been more cooperative, we could have had the train up and running earlier."

Policeman discovered a rotting corpse in a car they believe was murdered around April 1. A body was found in a car parked on the side of a road in Gorham. The car, a 1985 Toyota, was found with a body inside.

The body was later identified as a woman in her 20s. She was last seen alive on April 1. Police are currently investigating the case as a murder.

Police were called to a shopping center in Portland after receiving a report of a suspicious person. When they arrived, they found a man acting strangely and screaming at the employees.

The man was eventually arrested and charged with disorderly conduct. He was later released on bail.

Wason, who ran for Governor in 1990 and 1992, is a write-in candidate in this year's primary election. Wason, who has been out of work for the past few years, is hoping to make a comeback in this year's election.

Grand jury will be held near a food court. One City Center, which Portland's real estate developers had hoped would be the city's new downtown development, has been faced with several challenges.

The federal government will not pay $27.90 per square foot to lease about 15,000 square feet at One City Center under the terms of a lease signed April 14. That's almost twice the average rate for downtown Clam's office space. But the government's vote is not the final word on the project, according to Citibank, which is leasing the space.

"There's a lot of work to be done," said Wason, who is running against incumbent Governor John Emmons.

Wason said he is confident he can get the project off the ground and that he will be able to move forward with the development.

Two more bills were passed last week, a bill requiring the Secretary of State to certify two years of professional experience for the position of State Treasurer and a bill allowing the Governor to appoint members of the Board of Education.

The bill requiring the Secretary of State to certify two years of professional experience for the position of State Treasurer was passed by a vote of 73-19 in the House and 25-14 in the Senate. The bill was sponsored by Rep. Tom Gouveia of Cumberland County.

The bill allowing the Governor to appoint members of the Board of Education was passed by a vote of 128-35 in the House and 31-6 in the Senate. The bill was sponsored by Rep. Paul Wason of Cumberland County.

Both of Maine's black South Africans voted in their home state's first all-black elections. Portland blacks, who have long been marginalized in the city's political process, voted for a black mayor, Andrew Hosch, and a black city councilor, Claire Fitch.

The news of Elaine's two sons in the United States is a heart-rending story, a tale of family and friends lost to violence. Elaine, a single mother, has been working diligently to reunite her children with their father and begin a new life in the United States. But her efforts have been met with resistance from immigration officials who are holding her sons hostage. Elaine is desperate to see her sons again and reunite with her family.

Portland's upcoming election makes the headlines 1994 years look like the Lincoln Douglas debates. This year's candidate for city council, school committee and water district hasn't prepared his or her campaign at Portland's public library. Instead, he's been organizing his campaign and preparing for upcoming debates.

Portland, a city of 65,000 people, is facing some serious challenges. The city has a budget deficit and is struggling to find ways to balance the budget. The city is also facing some tough decisions about how to use its limited resources.

One of the most pressing issues facing the city is the issue of housing. Portland is facing a housing crisis, with many people struggling to find affordable housing. The city is working on a number of initiatives to address this issue, including creating affordable housing and providing incentives for developers to build more affordable housing.

Another issue facing the city is the issue of crime. Portland is facing a rise in crime, with many people feeling unsafe in their neighborhoods. The city is working on a number of initiatives to address this issue, including increasing police presence and providing incentives for businesses to be more crime-preventive.

Portland's schools are also facing some challenges. The city is working on a number of initiatives to improve the city's schools, including providing additional funding and resources to support teachers and students.

The city is also facing some tough decisions about how to use its limited resources. The city is working on a number of initiatives to balance the budget, including cutting spending and increasing revenue.

For Portland School Committee

Frances Frost
401 Cumberland Ave.
Post 1989, is expected to be the committee's new lone District 1 school committee member. And she appears well-qualified for the post.

Prior to 1989 to 1989 Frost was an administration office of George Washington University School of Law. Thus she was a working as an entry mediator for the state attorney general's office and chaired the Maine Art Commission during the Brent administration. She now works in the public affairs office of the University of Maine.

But Frost said her father's laboratory's concept of Frost's found her working as a company's associate for the school committee.

"I told him I would try for District 1 school committee for a couple of years to see what I had there. But he said I was pretty good involved in this school committee meeting.

"I said, and he said, 'You're right!'

Riff and went on to serve on the school committee because he's a product of public schools and believes public education is the "most important investment we can make in the future of our state's students and our state's future," he said.

But he's not simply patronizing
involved in this school committee meeting.

Riff believes the school district's would benefit from more public scrutiny.
Riff likes the idea of having meetings in different neighborhoods around the city.

How we're voting on Tuesday and why

For City Council At-large: Dick Paulson

It’s likely that Dick Paulson, the incumbent, will win an award for stubbornness. Both opponents and detractors of Paulson are quick to point out that in the council, it seems, he is the only one who’s willing to stand and fight. But for a good volunteer and a quick researcher, he’s known to be a good listener and he’s shown a knack for asking the right questions.

Dick Paulson is the most articulate advocate for moving the plan from vision to reality. His positions are steadfast and his strategy is straightforward. He’s confident that Portland can’t afford to lose one of the candidates who would likely see the budget plan through to its final enactment.

It’s a tough call. But, in our opinion, Paulson has the chance to win on a few points.

For District 3: Curtis Peavey

There are so many good candidates, it was a tough choice. But the decision was clear. Curtis Peavey was the candidate who stood out.

Curtis Peavey has been a strong advocate for the city’s transportation plan. He’s also been a strong supporter of the city’s education system. He’s been a strong voice for the city’s environment and he’s been a strong supporter of the city’s social service system.

Curtis Peavey is a candidate who stands for the future. He’s a candidate who stands for the city. He’s a candidate who stands for the people.

Once again, there were those two2 criminals convicted in a violent, maximum security prison out on the streets of Portland. It’s a time when many people feel the need to do something to help.

It's easy (we'll help you), it's fun, it's the nicest thing you can do for your own brain, and with the money you save you can take out to dinner too—maybe twice! We've got the tools, the worktable, a million beautiful beads and employees who love to assist with designing beautiful jewelry. You can do it!

Message for the Moms & Wives:

Unless you just returned from Maine from a three-year archeological dig in 1973, you already know how much fun it is to design and make your own jewelry at Caravan Beads™. So your message to: come see the ten pounds of Art Glass we just got! Spectacular mosaic quality tiles and chunks begging to be transformed into earrings, bracelets and necklaces.

Little Festival of the Unexpected

While there's no denying the pull of a world premiere, there's nothing quite as compelling about the "Brigadoon" that's now playing at the Portland Stage Company as the last one did. And PSC artistic director Michael Evens has finally given us the fifth annual Little Festival of the Unexpected "New, new, new, new, new, new."

Mad Horse clears the fence

The Canal Roberts strategy worked. When the financially embattled Mad Horse Theatre announced a few weeks ago that it would be able to leave 1588, Portland, its stake in the former Portland Stage space, the theater up and running for at least another season. When the pledges are collected, Mad Horse can move into its new space.

Theater plans to begin its new lease with a Portland native Arts Commission emergency grant to look over in operations and make recommendations.

Portlandites are invited to celebrate Mad Horse's return with a party at 4:40 p.m. on Thursday, April 28 from 5 to 7 p.m. Jenny Woodman and her band will perform, and the entire 550 admissions will go to benefit the theater.

Zuba redefines "real food for real people"

Have you ever spent a few stringing out on drugs? It's not pretty. Yet I haven't stopped the sale industry by pumping its stock full of hormones or loading gravy sauce with potato chips. Not for that matter, it stopped him and proves your same-sounding beams from ending up in your loins. So, what's the most eaten to do?

Well, you could go to "Mad Horse's Farm in Freestay, which, since 1890, it's been noted to keep cows off drugs. And this, according to the farm's literature, results in organic beef that also in keener, more flavorful, natural beef as opposed to antlered beef, which, incidentally, proves to be more of a flavor".

Why? "Two ideas form is part of a wide- for Portland. It's unique and the University of Southern Maine, Maine for a kind of educational, agricultural and ecological farm. It even boasts a food co-op where I worked when I drove up last weekend, I wasn't committed to any of this. I had wanted to check out one thing: the organic cows.

BOYCOTT MP$BN FUNDRAISING EFFORTS

MP$BN receives millions of dollars every year in donations from the Maine Yankee Atomic Power Company and its corporate sponsors. In view of the failure to fund the storage and disposal of Maine Yankee-derived radioactive wastes and especially the safe interim storage of high-level waste as required by law, MP$BN’s active participation in the RADIOACTIVE WASTE RACKET compromises MP$BN’s role as Maine’s most important and most reliable broadcasting network.

Confidence in MP$BN is further undermined by its selective and restricted reporting on controversial nuclear safety, waste disposal, and decommissioning issues, as well as nuclear accidents affecting Maine citizens.

If MP$BN continues as a beneficiary of the radioactive waste racket, let the implicit become explicit: MP$BN = Private, not Public, Broadcasting in behalf of Private Corporate Sponsors.

Public Broadcast is worth fighting for. Boycott funding the Maine Yankee Broadcasting Network until it stops participating in the radioactive waste racket and the information gagged upon which it depends.
