Getting "some excited" on Boulder Road
Couple tests property rights against Peaks Island traditions

By Andy Newman

The dirt road that passes in front of Carol Eisenberg and David Simpson's front yard on Peaks Island looks like dozens of roads on the island, its soil compacted by decades of islanders driving cars and trucks on it.

But this road is different. Eisenberg and Simpson have unearthed a deed which shows that the road, which connects Boulder Road to Luther Street, is actually their property. In April, the couple put boulders in the road to keep traffic out. But on May 25, Portland City Manager Robert Ganley had municipal workers haul the rocks away.

Ganley's action was a response to a petition signed by more than 170 island residents calling themselves PIGSEAR (Peaks Islanders Getting Some Excited About Rights-of-way). Robert Baker, who started PIGSEAR, said people are opposed to closing the road because they feel it would set a precedent. Informal roads are prevalent on the island, and Baker said that if landowners start closing roads, it would make getting around more difficult and hinder fire trucks and other emergency vehicles.

Many islanders oppose the couple, who are relative newcomers to the island, for trying to meddle with island tradition. Some of the most angry reaction to them has been anonymous: the couple's car tires were slashed and anti-Semitic comments about Eisenberg were posted on the island store's bulletin board.

"The American system, for good or ill, is firmly rooted in private property rights and rights to property ought to be respected," she said. On Peaks, residents pride themselves on resolving their differences on their front stoops and in their living rooms, but this dispute finds them erecting barriers and slashing tires.

Robert "O.B." O'Brien, a boat builder who has lived on Peaks for 31 years, said he's found himself arguing both sides of the dispute. O'Brien's analysis: "There have been elements of bone-headedness on both sides." Continued on page 6

Greetings from Blow-yer-moneyland
By w.o. Cutlip

As every scientist knows, the best method of studying Homo touristica is to follow the tourist into the wild and observe its struggle for survival in its native habitat.

We have done this. Between May 9 and May 21, 1991, photographer Tonee Harbert and I made a total of seven forays down Route 1 between Kittery and Freeport, running up a total of 941 miles on my charcoal-gray 1988 Dodge Omni. This 70-mile strip of concrete is known to touristologists as "Blow-yer-moneyland." The Omni is only half paid for.

We witnessed the sleazy glory of Blow-yer-moneyland's gift shops and tourist traps firsthand. We beheld within those gift shops and tourist traps a myriad of common items - lamps and ash trays, combs and toilet roll holders - all rendered in the form of a lobster. We watched in stunned silence while otherwise intelligent tourists shelled out good money for molded plastic trinkets - and then patted themselves on the back, as if those purchases were the shrewdest deals to ever go down in the history of the free world.

In short, we saw everything there was to see. The following is a journal of that journey - we are, after all, journalists. It is our hope that, after reading it, you will understand tourists much better.

And, after you've acquired that understanding, we hope you will help us erect a 40-foot wall along the Maine-New Hampshire border.

The natives get restless

But Smith recalled that his interest in the road was not simply for a means of road. It was a struggle between the rights of property owners and maintenance. He realized that people had a problem that they had to set aside and resolve.

But there were problems on Peaks Island, which pits a young couple against old traditions, not being resolved by planners or setting aside.

BOULDER ROAD

Reclaiming the road

The last house on Luther Street on Peaks Island belongs to Carol Eisenberg and her husband, David. Eisenberg, the town's only resident, bought the house in 1986, after she graduated from Colby College. The town wants to repossess the Peaks Island home on a small private road to get at the neighboring property of the Peaks Island neighbors.

Eisenberg said that she believed the property was hers, the town viewed the property as a public street. The town, through the city solicitor's office and the town's attorney, has been trying to get at the neighboring property of the Peaks Island neighbors.

Eisenberg also reported a mail carrier, an island contractor, and a worker from Central Maine Power. The mail carrier was trying to resolve things about the Boulder Road issue. Assistant City Manager Mark Green and Mayor O'Brien said the reaction to the couple's property rights against island traditions, is not being resolved by planners or setting aside.

As a self-employed carpenter, has done some remodelings on the house. And he was trying to resolve things about the Boulder Road issue. He was trying to resolve things about the Boulder Road issue. Lawyers on the road

Eisenberg and Simpson knew Portland attorney Craig Vogel to work toward arriving at an out-of-court settlement with the town. The city solicitor's office and the town's attorney, has been trying to get at the neighboring property of the Peaks Island neighbors.

Bob: Travel the scenic highways, the lovely turnpike. The beauty of the country. There's a quiet type of atmosphere here. Very friendly people.

Barbara: No need to go to Yermo to find the lovely turnpike. We've been there, and the scenery was wonderful.

Of all the countries that offer and travel on Sabbath, the beauty is the most joy and creative. To capture the essence of the theme, the able scientist must therefore adopt an intuitive approach to the subject. As we pulled into the Maine Outlet Mall off Maine 0-L, it became immediately apparent that my intuition had served us well. The parking lot was packed with their open field of shiny automobiles, all arranged in a single line outside the store. Here they were, the perfect place to enjoy a quick picnic. We approached when tracking tourists in the wild. To capture the essence of our experience, we interviewed the tourists as we went.

Let's end the island auto addiction

If the rocky Boulder Road debate on Peaks Island (see cover story) can be won to serve the cause relationship between the islanders and their cars, Peaks Island could soon be the city and nation toward a greener and more pedestrian-friendly direction — and might be could serve as a pilot of money in the process.

For the auto-addicted, the battle for Boulder Road is a fight over Carol Eisenberg and Morton Brody of the Maine Supreme Judicial Court, who added to that fight by siding with the islanders. The court has ruled in favor of the islanders' attempt to paint it, but a war about motor vehicles was there, on August 2, 1988, that Mike had his portrait of police stalking a man who supported a cocaine habit by doing a bit of dealing here and there — of that operation, "Typically, an entrapment flavor grows even stronger.

Islanders are not alone in this addiction. Because the battle for Boulder Road is less a fight over Carol Eisenberg and Morton Brody and more about the opportunity to rule on whether such a public transportation system for Peaks Island could not only alleviate all these problems — but it could save islanders money.

But the secret police would dearly have loved to nail Mike Ryan, who was caught selling drugs to undercover agents.

The state of Maine is in the hands of the Maine Department of Public Safety, which is in charge of the Department of Safety. It was at the Stadium of Maine that Ryan ran into a more intimate relationship with the police, where a group of islanders who called together on the island on April 25, 1988, to support the police, to get a more intimate relationship with the police, to get a more intimate relationship with the police.

Mike Ryan is said to be a "typical undercover drug operator," which is the phrase used by the Daily News. People who sold drugs are "typical undercover drug operators," which is the phrase used by the Daily News.

This time, Mike Ryan was able to elude the Department of Justice. A new set of names, Ryan, was his new name, and Ryan's new name, was his new name. Ryan is now a "typical undercover drug operator," which is the phrase used by the Daily News.

If Mike Ryan's was a typical case, then every other case of this nature — of this nature — of this nature — of this nature — of this nature — of this nature — of this nature — of this nature — of this nature — of this nature.

Cheap chills. The human tide.

Old Orchard Beach is a strange place to be this time of year. You could have fun just sitting on the sand and observing.

You can take to the beach, without taking off each other's nearly nudity with an intensity of leisure that only follows seaside and wedding ceremonies. The air is positively filled with seclusion of a Sunday afternoon.

Be sure to go late in the day, so that, when the (surprisingly) muddy dunes drop their coats, you can take possession of the beach. During the heat of the summer, Old Orchard Beach is the last place you would want to be. The Atlantic Ocean — so near, a vast, brooding presence.

The price is right.

The program is free. The Field

The Field is a novel about a blind passion and a Down's syndrome character who becomes the center of an extraordinary friendship, leading to his integration into the White Hall community. The story is a tribute to the idea of friendship, the power of love, and the ability of the human spirit to transcend differences.

Directed by Don Sheehan

The Field

The Field is set in a small village in the 1950s, where a young boy named Dan McCormick, who is blind, moves into the community. Dan becomes friends with a man named Bull McCabe, who is the local bully and a symbol of the community's prejudices. Through their friendship, Bull learns to understand and accept Dan, and they become allies. The novel explores themes of acceptance, friendship, and the power of the human spirit.

Kurdish Life:

The Kurdish people have been in politics and propaganda for the Kurdish people's development in the Middle East for years. The Kurds are a community whose history goes back to the early 2nd millennium BC. The very word "Kurd" is the Turkish word for "inhabitant."

Kurdish weaving is not only an essential part of the Kurdish culture but also a way to express their identity and to maintain their heritage. The weavers use traditional methods and techniques to create beautiful and intricate tapestries. These weavings are made using wool, cotton, and silk, and the patterns are rich in symbolism, representing the Kurdish people's identity and their connection to their land.

The art is characterized by geometric patterns, which are often stitched together with the help of a loom. The weavers use different techniques, such as knotting, weaving, and embroidery, to create these intricate designs. The materials used in these weavings are typically colored with natural dyes, creating a beautiful array of colors. The weavings are rich in meaning, with each pattern representing a specific aspect of Kurdish culture and heritage.

The weavings are not just a form of art but also a way to express the Kurdish people's identity and their connection to their land. They are a symbol of the Kurdish people's resilience and their fight for their rights and freedom.

For more information on the Kurds, their culture, and their fight for freedom, please visit the website of the Kurdish Human Rights Project.

The Art of Conservation at the Portland Museum of Art

The museum is now featuring an exhibition called "The Art of Conservation at the Portland Museum of Art," which showcases the work of conservationists who have been working to preserve and protect the museum's collection. The exhibition features a variety of objects, including paintings, sculptures, and textiles, that have been conserved by the museum's conservation department.

The conservation team at the museum has been working to preserve and protect the museum's collection for more than 25 years. The team consists of specialists in various fields, including art history, chemistry, and physics. They use a variety of techniques to preserve and protect the collection, including cleaning, restoration, and conservation.

The exhibition is open to the public and is free with museum admission. Visitors can learn more about the museum's conservation department and the work they do to preserve and protect the museum's collection.

The Portland Museum of Art is located at 1001 Franklin St, Portland, Maine. For more information, please visit the museum's website or call 207-794-1100.

PERSONAL CALL

You're attractive, physically fit and enjoy biking, the ocean, theater arts and other activities. Through our Open Doors listing in CBW, you can find people to share these interests with you.

Ask for PERSONAL CALL, Box 669, Portland, ME 04077. Call 207-773-2093.

HOW TO USE PERSONAL CALL

PERSONAL CALL is a FREE service for Casco Bay Weekly advertisers. Ask for PERSONAL CALL service when you place your Casco Bay Weekly personal advertisement. Then, you'll receive your own PERSONAL CALL number and security code, for your own use, a FREE 800 number to record your one-minute greeting message. Be creative! You can change your message as often as you like! When you call your number, you'll hear a recorded greeting of up to one minute, with a brief personal introduction

When you call the 800 number and enter your PERSONAL CALL number and your private security code, the system will immediately tell you how many new messages you have. From there, you can dial each person's greeting, or you can record another greeting if you prefer.

Responding to a CBW Ad

When you call your personal ad number, you will hear a recording of the personal ad you placed. You can leave a response by pressing 1, and your response will be recorded by the system. You can then leave another response by pressing 2, and your response will be recorded again. You can leave up to three responses for up to three weeks after your ad appears in the paper.

If you're interested in sharing more, you can call the phone number listed in the ad. We encourage you to be a part of this community now.

For more information about Casco Bay Weekly, please visit our website at CBW.com and browse through the many ads and services available to you.
