Jack Newick has been known for telling "Fish Tales..."

What is tai chi chuan?

For many, tai chi is a gentle form of exercise that emphasizes balance and relaxation. It is practiced by millions around the world to improve health and well-being. However, for Gene Golden, tai chi is much more than just a physical practice.

Gene Golden has practiced the Golden School of Tai Chi Chuan on Congress Street since 1989. His interest in the ancient Chinese martial art dates back to 1975, when he became a student of Master William Chen in New York City. Today, Golden carries the tradition onward with some 75 Greater Portland students.

How did this all start?

The roots go back some 1,200 years or so to a Taoist monk by the name of Chang San Feng who lived on Mount Wudang in Hubei province in China. According to the legend, he was walking in the woods when he came upon an altercation between a large crane and a small snake. The crane, eventually tiring it out, thus escaping with its life. The snake, on the other hand, was not so lucky.

Gene Golden: "It is unknown whether the crane or the snake lived, but it is known that the crane lived longer."

What is tai chi chuan?

Tai means great, in the sense of matter in the universe, all that is, or that which makes up physical reality. Chi relates to the internal energy or spirit that, when infused in matter or in physical structure creates life. (In Chinese it is also referred to as "smooth.") Chuan means "true" in Chinese, which relates to the actual application of the principle.

How did this all start?

No exaggerating the fact that many of the stories that Jack Newick tells are a bit farfetched, but there's no denying the fact that New England is home to some of the most interesting people in the world. From the shores of Maine to the mountains of New Hampshire, there are stories to be told.

Gene Golden: "To me, the idea is to always stay in tune with our bodies and take advantage of any movement that we can.

A jury ruled that an AIDS patient was discriminated against. The estate of a deceased Portland man was awarded $912,000 in a civil rights lawsuit against Maine Mote Made Dips. The suit claimed that the man's rights were violated by not being offered employment.

A huge vacant building in downtown Portland is expected to be rehabilitated and the city hopes for a ripple effect if it loans $1 million to the developer. The $2.74 million deal will help the college renovate the huge vacant building and generate enough revenue to start repaying the loan in five years.

A mega-park was proposed to save Maine's wilderness, and only one candidate was against it. Green Party candidate Jonathan Carter supports the creation of a 3.2 million-acre national park in northern Maine. The park, the largest in the nation, would be called the Maine Northwoods National Park.

Maine Mote Made Dips added a new flavor to their line of dips. The new flavor, Hummus, is said to be delicious on veggies and crackers.

Brennan, familiar faces capture state races

Woman rule Portland

Joe Brennan that ran for governor back in the day, as he so often pointed out. That didn't stop voters from giving Brennan the Democratic nomination for governor. Apparently, as a Brennan ad noted, in this overcharging red ink Salem, voters wanted the kinder, more reasonable candidate. The Smith family and others spent $16 million on their campaign, of which a mere $30,452 came from in the leading law firms. Then Dennis Dunleavy was the Demo­cratic candidate for governor. In the end, he lost his race to Brennan, who ran for the Democratic nomination for governor and won it. Brennan was gracious in victory, giving way to the new administration.

District 21, covering parts of Portland, Cumberland and York counties, had the closest race of the day. Republican challenger Robert Pendleton took on Democratic incumbent Gary Hilkus in a race that went down to the wire. Pendleton's challenger Hilkus, an attorney and former Portland city councilor, received 11,619 votes, just 10 votes short of a majority. Pendleton received 11,621 votes, giving him a narrow victory. Pendleton will face State Senator Terry Cramer in November.

Philosophy? Serunian keeps watch at a local bar.

TALES OF A HIGH-HEELED GUMSHOE

I selected my own model, well used, foreign-made car over the gleaming pieces of green in the parking lot. There was no money back. In a moment I'd be off to do duty. I threw open the door and stepped out for a breath of air.

The notice of a private eye most naturally conjures an image of a trench coat and soft-fermington, cigarette-smoking, whiskey-sipping, cigarette-smoking, whiskey-sipping, woman sitting in a hard, leather chair, surrounded by police charts, magnifying glass, and round-the-clock coffee. A man who doesn't smoke.

In fact, becoming a private investigator is a lot easier to do than you think. Serunian, for example, got to her career through a common avenue - the local police force.

When Serunian was young, she worked as a cook at the airport. The job was boring, and she was tired of making the same food every day. She decided to change careers, and she joined the police force.

Serunian was drawn to the field of investigation because of her love for solving mysteries. She had always been fascinated by the idea of uncovering the truth and solving complex cases.

People who are interested in becoming a private investigator should have a strong curiosity about the world around them. They should be able to ask questions and think critically to solve problems.

Serunian is a testament to the idea that anyone can become a private investigator. With determination and hard work, anyone can follow in her footsteps and become a part of this exciting field.

Concluding the research on terms coming to reply, My garbage, myself

By Marco Vbihe

It took me a couple of hours to put the last garbage bag together. First, I separated the contents and put them into the appropriate buckets, overshot to make sure they were all there. Then I jumped on a neighbor's recycling program. Finally, I cleaned the hands of the initial cleaner's advertisement about the benefits of recycling. I was satisfied with the cleanliness of the advertisement. On the ground, I also had to wait until nowdesigner's sources to be told what to do with these things.

I'm not saying that it's safe to throw garbage in the street. I'm not saying that it's safe to throw garbage in the water. But I am saying that it's safe to throw garbage in the trash. The trash is designed to be thrown in the trash. And the trash is designed to be thrown in the trash.

Because the trash is designed to be thrown in the trash, and the trash is designed to be thrown in the trash, and the trash is designed to be thrown in the trash. And the trash is designed to be thrown in the trash.

TEARS IN HER EARS

Matrice Berg is probably best known as a country music songwriter. Over the past decade, she's had a hit or two for the best known of the current crop of country music stars. Trisha Yearwood, Patty Loveless and Reba McEntire have all recorded her work, particularly with a Nashville upswing and a strong show business background. She's also had her songs on the radio and in the movies.

Berg's most interesting songs, however, are the ones she's written for herself, with a Nashville upswing and a strong show business background. She's also had her songs on the radio and in the movies.
