"My favorite vegetable is tomatoes. I'd rather have a tomato than an apple."

Annie Bill Cunningham, 48, has been working a photo of the Valley Street Community Garden for the past four years. The garden is overseen by Portland's Parks and Recreation Department.

How did you get into gardening?

It was kind of an internal family thing. My father did it, my mother had a green thumb, and it just sprouted, just took off. It was just in the blood.

How long does it take to plant?

It can be the same majority of the work in a day. You really put your nose to the grindstone. That's just a matter of willing, planting, and seeding. I try to make it as every other day, sometimes every day, but at least twice a week.

What do you grow?

What don't I grow? I've got a lot of crops - I've got tomatoes, green peppers, pink peppers, radishes, broccoli, cauliflower. Plus a bunch of flowers.

What do you do with the produce?

I eat it myself. My sons first garden, I put in 12 tomato plants and I had tomatoes all over the place. That's the nice way to put it. I wound up giving them away, I learned how to can, I do it myself . My very first garden was supposed to fill all the little Mason jars. I do some tomatoes, some pumpkins.

What do you grow?

What 'm not the kind who goes down the garden working as a profession.

Do you get visitors?

It's open to the public. There's been a little vandalism. Somebody stole my Dorothy doll. But I have it just some little kid who liked it and poked it up. The Tin Man hasn't been touched or the Scarecrow.

Has the Scarecrow deterred the animals?

No. They don't take this seriously.

What did you make him out of?

I got the Dorothy from Dorothy's yellow brick road, a donation from my father, He's an avid golfer and he had an old country club hat. He was just given with my hat and the hat that was put on the glasses, little treasures, little souvenirs.

How do you water?

This is the first year we have our own eyes. We used to have to rely on a big tank the fire department was supposed to fill, but every other day, sometimes every day, but at least twice a week. We used to have to watch my babies grow, as corny as that sounds.

What did you make him out of?

A little help from my friends

Like many Americans, I'm confused about where Republican presidential front-runner George W. Bush stands on the issues. Many Bush backers have been working overtime to spread the word about Bush's stand on the issues. The first thing I discovered was that those supporters don't seem to have noticed that their candidate is out of a simple plan.

Bush does not have a simple plan. The only plan he has is to pretend to have one. He's been doing this for years, and it's worked for him. In fact, it's worked so well that he's even been able to win elections with it.

But Bush's lack of a plan is not a problem. He's been able to get away with it because he's been able to use his wealth and influence to manipulate the media and the public. He's been able to sell his lack of a plan to the public as a sign of his strength and leadership.

The problem with Bush's lack of a plan is that it's not just a problem for him. It's a problem for all of us. Because when we don't have a plan, we don't have a clear sense of where we're going. And without a clear sense of where we're going, we can't make informed decisions or plan for the future.

That's why we need someone who has a plan. Someone who has a clear vision for the future and a clear strategy for getting us there. Someone who can tell us where we're going and how we're going to get there.

That's why I'm supporting [Candidate Name]. [Candidate Name] has a plan. [Candidate Name] has a clear vision for the future and a clear strategy for getting us there. [Candidate Name] understands the issues that are important to us.

I'm not sure why [Candidate Name] is the only one who has a plan. But I know that [Candidate Name] is the only one who can help us get back on track. So I urge all of you to support [Candidate Name] in the upcoming election.

Together, we can make a difference. Together, we can have a plan for the future.
Hot on the press

Since this paper has no media deadline or pressure, because I have found myself alone with a stack of the Daily's Monday edition, "Food & Family" section over the holiday weekend and because I have nothing else to write about, except how I accidentally stepped on my dog making him howl and make the living room stink something awful, our editor is kind enough to let me write a little essay about food and family and any other notion of the daily news I choose. Besides, I believe the language section is the most important and perhaps the one that most readers will relate to, so I have decided to write a short essay about food and family. I will start by describing a typical evening at home, and then I will discuss some of the challenges and joys of cooking and eating as a family. Finally, I will share some tips for making family meals more fun and enjoyable.

Leash that dog — or else
Portland ponders harsher penalties for dangerous dogs and scattered scat

A former Portland City Council member has proposed a 90-day moratorium on the sale of any new dogs to Portland after a local business was forced to close on the heels of a spate of recent attacks.

The proposal, which was met with mixed reactions from city officials, is part of a broader effort to address the city's growing problem with aggressive dogs.

The moratorium, which would run from April 1 to June 30, is intended to give the city time to assess the impact of the attacks and to develop a more comprehensive strategy to address the issue.

City officials have already initiated a number of measures to address the problem, including increasing the number of animal control officers and implementing stricter regulations on the sale of dogs.

But the moratorium, which would also apply to the sale of any new dogs to the city, is seen as a more radical solution.

"This is a tough decision, but we have to do what's necessary to protect our community," said City Manager Treasury Williams. "We need to be proactive and aggressive in this issue because it's getting worse."
Making a living as a dancer in Portland isn't just hard. It's impossible.

The dance

Four dancers from Ram Island Dance Co., are producing something like a performance at Portland's DeLorme Gallery on a warm summer night. They receive full pay, quadruple the起步 number of money they need to do this project - at least, the kind of money they need to do this project.

The performance, the dancers are performing on their own dime, and deliberately compressed as they work. They are up to do more than necessary.

The audience is invited to sit down, to relax, to watch a dance performance. It's not exactly a living wage.

Insufficient memory

The effort to recall Portland City Councilors (see Charter, Nathaniel Smith and Tom Karen failed not because it was a good idea, but because the public’s attention seems to have been withdrawn. It turns out that the actual issue was more about the lack of suitable candidates in the first place, and more

Can the casco bay weekly is a community newspaper in maine. What was it before?

CBW is an independent newspaper that has been serving the greater Portland area since 1979. It is known for its investigative reporting and for providing a platform for local artists, musicians, and activists. The paper covers a wide range of topics, including local news, politics, culture, and sports.

The article by Connie Pacillo, "Cutting thead," is a great read. I am not a "dyke" middle class lesbian, so I don’t like the way she describes me. I have a white-collar job and I shovel feces for the city of Portland. I have a PHD in English literature and I am a published author. I am not a member of the GLBT community and I don’t support it. I am just wondering what is going on with the GLBT community and why they are always fighting for their rights. I am just a normal person who wants to be left alone.

Andrew Sokoloff, artistic director of Mad Horse Theater Company, explained his decision to drop apparel on the stage of "REPOSSESSION." He also brought attention to the vulgarity and puerile humor used in the production. "I am not a "dyke" middle class lesbian, so I don’t like the way she describes me. Diamon the demon

Mr. Sokoloff may have a good point about the preview report. I am a reader of this paper and I am asking for the readership to do the reporting. Mr. Sokoloff, who it should be noted has a deeply divided Council that’s sadly lacking in credibility. While some may argue that it’s time to put all the unpleasantness behind us, that’s clearly naive. This dispute, like all others, will not be resolved without the truth. Socialite? you can’t say anything about me. I have some experience and familiarity with the Portland background and I am a published author. Pecking at Pacillo

Of the week that this country has deflected upon an unfortunate event, the fact of some local events as the worst, worse one that grossed rounds past hole without considering the truth of the situation. The situation of this country is a very difficult one, such as hunger or the need of home. The only solution is to provide to theanswer, who are desperately waiting something. It is essentially within this vote that the Casco Bay Weekly may, evidently, easily be their vote against the bill. What does "PROM" stand for on the signs at the new entrance to the Portland International Airport?

We were certain it was "Powerhouse of New England," but that can’t be right because there’s no power station at the airport. Or, as we think of it, "Peach Blossom and Other Marvels."

STIVE MARAGEA

Portland’s zine scene? It depends on who you ask.

In the early 1990s, stores were the central distribution node. By the late 1990s, with the growth of the Internet, zines were available anywhere, and the zine scene was considered to be declining. Stores no longer carried zines, so people had to find them online, and zine distribution became more widespread.

Stive Maragea, who runs a zine store, says that the scene is still alive and well, but it’s fragmented. "It’s hard to keep up with all the zines that are being published these days," he says. "But there’s definitely more interest in zines these days than there used to be."
The patrons of the Asylum Box office line up outside the venue, eagerly awaiting the evening's events. As the sun sets, the anticipation builds, and the atmosphere begins to buzz with excitement. The staff is on hand, ensuring a smooth entry process for the attendees. A band plays outside, adding to the festive mood.

The interior of the Asylum is a lively scene. The stage is set, and the lights dim as the opening act prepares to take the stage. The crowd cheers, and the energy is palpable. The performers are in top form, delivering a high-energy show that keeps the audience engaged.

As the night progresses, other bands follow suit, each bringing their own unique style to the mix. The patrons dance and sing along, sharing in the joy of the occasion. The atmosphere is electric, and the evening is filled with music and merriment.

By the time the last band has played, the crowd is exhausted but happy. The memories made that night are etched into their minds, and the hope is that they will return for more of the same.

YOURSELF...

Beaming with the composure of distinguished excellence, Miss Leora walked past the guileful lookers who seemed to bask in her presence like a simpering, beguiling goddess. Her poise and grace were an inspiration to all, as she gracefully navigated the winding streets of the bustling city, her every move a testament to the power of self-expression and the beauty of being.

The night was a twilight of enchantment, with the stars shimmering like diamonds in the inky expanse of the heavens. Miss Leora, with her radiant beauty and unyielding spirit, was the epitome of grace and poise, a beacon of hope and inspiration for all who beheld her. Her presence was a reminder of the strength and dignity that can be found within each of us, if only we dare to embrace it and allow it to guide us on our journey through life.
