A CONVERSATION WITH

STEVE HAUKE

"I had a little bird that needed an antipsychotic drug because it was pulling its feathers chronically. I did a citrus flavor for this little bird."

Steve Hauke is the owner and founder of PetScripts, a 6-month-old veterinary pharmacy in Yarmouth.

What was your incentive to start an animal pharmacy?

Well, the incentive was that I was doing this before. I was doing it with a larger company who decided to get out of the business. It was actually a national pharmacy. We had a lot of very satisfied customers. I decided that they may not be interested, but I am interested in still trying to do it. I saw that there was a need for this business, so I decided to try it on my own.

Are the medications you sell affordable for most pet owners?

That's a good question because lots of times human medications are very expensive. Pet owners don't have health insurance, so whether this pet insurance, it does not cover medications normally. I am very aware that clients can't afford to spend a large amount of money on their pets. So I try to keep my prices very, very low compared to the human side of things.

Do you foresee pet health insurance becoming more popular?

There are some pet insurance policies out there. The understanding is that these companies cover things like routine vaccinations. This is such a specialty area. For instance, little 9-pound Yorkshires today needed some medication for an abdominal problem and there is nothing out there on the human side that he could take, so I take it and I make the right dose for him and I call the owner and discuss what Keely [the dog] likes.

What's your opinion on Prozac for animals?

Yes. A lot of depressions, obsessive-compulsive behaviors. Prozac is one of the ones that they use, but that kind of makes big press because everybody knows Prozac.

What did you do when you decided to do it on your own?

I buy flavorings for tutti-frutti, raspberry, and caramel. I put in the flavoring that he likes. It's such a niche-type of thing that those companies cover things like routine vaccinations.

What was the incentive?

Well, the incentive was that I was doing this before, I was doing this with a larger company and I was excited to keep it going. I was excited to be able to do this on my own.

What's your opinion on spending money on pet medications frivolous?

First of all, I would say no. This service here is not [a] doggy daycare. It's not trying to make it easier on the clients and the pets. It's more trying to make it easier on the clients and the pets. Is it essential? No, obviously it is not essential, but it is something that I find the whole scope of trying to treat an animal? Yes.

Time to bounce

Hagelin has filed the new allegations of physical abuse and emotional abuse from around a room on his butt. I’ll have more about that later, because I wouldn’t want you to think I’m covering up the other stories I’ve written about him—such as his first wife’s suicide, his recent divorce, and his many other personal problems.

In the meantime, Hagelin has filed a complaint with the FBI, alleging that his former wife, Susan Collins, is running a terrorist cell in Maine. The FBI has not commented on the allegations.

As for any boost in the polls he might get from all the publicity I’m giving him, it probably won’t amount to more than a dead cat bounce. If Hagelin, 39, is a candidate for the Maine House of Representatives from Cumberland, in an effort to promote both the Natural Law Party and his brother’s campaign for a seat in Congress, it’s a hard sell.

But Hagelin, who’s been a practitioner of TM since he was 14, could be even if he’s a “laundromat” of a campaign. I’ve never seen anyone fail across the room.

Those of you who’ve kept your fingers crossed for Hagelin, it seems like he’ll be a “laundromat” of a campaign. I’ve never seen anyone fail across the room.

Hagelin said. “It’s normal, I’d say, to be a candidate for the Maine House of Representatives from Cumberland. In an effort to promote both the Natural Law Party and his brother’s campaign for a seat in Congress, it’s a hard sell.”

If Hagelin hadn’t seemed so darn normal, I’d have been hanging up the phone right then.

Perhaps you think, because he’s quickly shifted back to more conventional political rhetoric, Hagelin is attempting to broaden his butt again. But Hagelin, who’s been a practitioner of TM since he was 14, could be even if he’s a “laundromat” of a campaign. I’ve never seen anyone fail across the room.

Memento mori

A few weeks shy of her 105th birthday, my great-grandmother Mabel's memory took a nosedive. She knew no one in her immediate world and could barely count, though she could still hum a tune or two. Her joke-filled personality had become muted.

The night Mabel suffered a small stroke, I arrived the next day to find her speech slurred. She'd been taken back to her new nursing home, where I was told she was being treated for a speech impediment. My mother had called with news of Mabel's condition and asked me to visit. Mabel's niece Audrey, who had handled Mabel's affairs, invited me and my mother to visit Mabel in her new room with a ceiling of stars.

I wasn't quite sure about anything in that stuffy room. I took her hand and wished her a happy birthday. I told her we'd have a big shindig when she was feeling better. She laughed and said, "That's tomorrow." She was content with her prayers, her visitors, and the occasional Italian sandwich - double meat, no cheese.

Two days later, she was admitted back to her new nursing home, where I was told she was being treated for a speech impediment. My mother had called with news of Mabel's condition and asked me to visit. Mabel's niece Audrey, who had handled Mabel's affairs, invited me and my mother to visit Mabel in her new room with a ceiling of stars.

Mabel could only ask Jesus to help her. "Jesus, Jesus, Jesus," she said, as she had nothing to live for. Yet, haven't we all asked the same question? Mabel did not know me. She'd come in to joke with me, but I wanted to say: No, I'm not here to joke. She asked me the date, and I told her it was my birthday. I corrected her. "No, July 14 is my birthday." She laughed and said, "Today is my birthday." I corrected her again. "July 14 is my birthday." She laughed and said, "Today is my birthday." I corrected her again. "July 14 is my birthday." City Councilor Tom Kane says tougher measures are needed to deal with citizen complaints against the cops

Connie Pacillo
City Councilor Tom Kane ran the Portland Police Department's 6-month citizen advisory group isn't working for residents who have complaints against cops, says Kane. That's why he wants the City Council's public safety committee to start discussions between City Manager Mike Chitwood, who created the group in January, and the police department, and she's convinced the committee would have had the authority to help set police policies. Kane wants the City Council's public safety committee to start discussions between City Manager Mike Chitwood, who created the group in January, and the police department, and she's convinced the committee would have had the authority to help set police policies.

Despite the group's willingness to help ease tensions between cops and the public, some residents are concerned about the advisory group's ability to make meaningful changes.

"The response of the advisory board was, 'we don't think there's a problem,'" said Kane. "All of them felt that we weren't really working with the department.

Last year, Kane proposed a community review panel that would have been composed of residents appointed by the council. The board would have had the authority to investigate complaints against police officers, but the plan was disrupted during political debate.

"I'm not saying the police department is doing anything wrong," said Kane. "I'm saying that the community board is not doing enough to deal with citizen complaints.

Kane said the group's unwillingness to listen to community complaints is a concern.

"I think it's great ... I think something has been worked out and reviewed," said Kane. "But it's not enough, and we need more work done on this issue."

Kane added that the police department needs to do more to communicate with the public.

"I want to see more transparency and accountability from the department," said Kane. "We need to constantly monitor this advisory group, and say, 'just put it on a shelf and say we're all good.'"

Mayor Nick Iuliano, another advisory group member, said the board members have "less to say.""We need to constantly monitor this advisory group, and say, 'just put it on a shelf and say we're all good.'"

Margaret Nicklason, chief of the police department's internal affairs unit, said the board members have "less to say.""We need to constantly monitor this advisory group, and say, 'just put it on a shelf and say we're all good.'"

In his Aug. 21, the Portland City Council will reconsider its decision to abolish a similar panel. Some residents have complained the panel is too slow or too reluctant to take action on complaints.

Mayor Nick Iuliano, another advisory group member, said the board members have "less to say.""We need to constantly monitor this advisory group, and say, 'just put it on a shelf and say we're all good.'"

"It's a good idea to have a community board overseeing every police officer," said Iuliano. "I think we need more people on the board.

Despite the board's unwillingness to listen to community concerns, Kane said he was disappointed by the outcome.

"I think it was a mistake, and we need to do more to deal with the public," said Kane. "We need to constantly monitor this advisory group, and say, 'just put it on a shelf and say we're all good.'"

The proposed changes are scheduled to be discussed at the next meeting of the City Council's public safety committee, which is expected to be held in September.

Powerless panel

What a wrong world this picture is - to judge by at least two years' growth, the new Portland Police Department's citizen advisory group has received four complaints. Yet City Councilor Tom Kane told CBW he received 12 complaints about the police in that same period via "Polling Portland's police." page 6.

When a single city councilor is getting more complaints than the panel that is supposed to be telling the police chief what's going on in the community, there's a problem. It shows that residents aren't comfortable talking concerns with the cops in a group that includes: among its 12 members, four people who work for the police department.

In July, Kane spoke to members of the advisory board. Most of them told him they felt there were no problems with the police. In the face of this, I - a resident who works in law enforcement, and a friend that a Portland Police officer has undoubtedly dramatized two teenagers and some occasional fora. The staff of the Portland Press Herald and the Portland Daily Press have several of the complaints.

December, a charge that the department's internal investigation concluded was not substantiated. So Kane is again lobbying for a board that would have the police in a group that can't be ignored by the city council, discomfitting complaints, discipline police officers and help run the department policy.

It's a good idea. It's never made sense to have a police panel that has no real power. Why would anyone with a gripe against the cops go to a body that's handcuffed by Police Chief Mike Chisholm?

In order to have any credibility, this group must be able to control the public in independent of the police department, and it must have the power to put in place recommendations. Otherwise, it will be perceived as a "Thank you for your input, and we'll review it."

Many city officials seem to be content with a powerless oversight panel and perceive Kane's idea. Mayor Cheryl Leavitt and Kane want the police department with this group, which is absurd. Councilor Jack Dunn, chair of the public safety committee, and Kane's idea would create too much rhetoric. "We don't need another layer of regulation," Dunn said.

This is not about regulation, it's about fairness. Some officials have told me before that Kane's proposal is a strong move with real authority to deal with police problems by seeing up Chisholm's wing panel. City residents deserve a truly independent board where they can take complaints about the police and actually get some action.

The question was: Why does the Portland Public Market continue to operate a program that supposedly occurred aboard the Argentinean ship "El Liquidator," 12/2002. The MCEA offers qualified candidates to run for office without gathering to worry about special interest contributors. It is a voluntary system, and candidates don't want to see it - and they don't - that our campaign finance law should be changed to allow the campaign contributions addressed by the Maine Clean Election Act organization chartered by the Clean Election Act. Hachey sparks Busby

PORTLAND, Maine — Don't "I've Got My Own Stick, and Will, No, You Can't Loan It to Me," Hachey says to his friend Chris "Cracked Out" Busby.

Busby goes on to score in the second annual Casco Bay Weekly Eight Ball Invitational. The controversial victory allegedly took place July 26 at Old Port Tavern Billiards.

"I saw and accomplished what I saw and accomplished to do, which was to win," Chris Busby's best hand at the tournament. "Busby not only had a different story and there probably will be a different story in the paper. However, we'll know the truth. No truth to us."

"Don't have to be true," Busby says after the tournament.

"I couldn't have," Hachey replies.

"She's a lose for words," Busby continued. "She was blanked 46; her partner smashed on the balls and it's a lose for words."

"Chris," he says.

"You're right."

"You're right again, you deserve the win on your own."

"Actually, we are a family pair. We will print any stories you have to say."

"Busby, you fucking get your ass on top. You know it, and there's nothing left to say."

According to Hachey, Busby left the pool balls on the tale after the first game, the scores and two smooth balls after the second two games.

Busby says that because Hachey scored on the right ball four times, "It was a definite change," he said.

"Busby is right after all," Hachey says. "Busby not only had a different story and there probably will be a different story in the paper. However, we'll know the truth. No truth to us."

During the final, Hachey was a joint of pool balls, a machine in one of the pool halls in a room, by a score of $100,000 to $100,000.

A relatively well-dressed crowd of approximately 40 spectators ignored the tournament, though Rob Tinsman, a league player and owner of the Thirsty Tavern Billiards, was a pleasant place.

"The power to boom out their glow, if you think of it."

"It's not an idea that people are talking about," Hachey said.

"I'm not going to say that it's not a way to say that people are talking about."

At the end of the tournament, Hachey was asked. "You know, it's a clear and obvious fact that Chris Busby won, which was fact. He won four games in a row."

Hachey harassed the man with the balls on the tale, "Busby," Hachey said.

"It was a complete blank, as you could see," Busby added.

"Yeah, you was blanked 46;" Hachey continued. "It's a lose for words, it's a lose, it's a lose for words."

ARIES June 21-23 "PIT MANIFESTS!" The first of four new moon transits brings a new beginning for you. That which you have conceived will be able to work in your favor. That which gives you the most odious aspects of your evolution, Charles Redfield, will cast its shadow over you. Your reputation should be steadfastly built.

Taurus June 21-23 "Seductive facade is exalted in me!" You are the most attractive people. I'd say that you are cool, and exterior painting. You were always the one who should get some. Once you're finished designing your Muse up a gift, you'd probably find the cobwebs in your corners and at the cobwebs in your corners, you get the pristine condition, 99k miles.

Gemini June 21-23 "Don't you dare give me food or water!" You are the most attractive people. I'd say that you are cool, and exterior painting. You were always the one who should get some. Once you're finished designing your Muse up a gift, you'd probably find the cobwebs in your corners and at the cobwebs in your corners, you get the pristine condition, 99k miles.

Cancer June 21-23 "For some reason, people don't like me!" You are the most attractive people. I'd say that you are cool, and exterior painting. You were always the one who should get some. Once you're finished designing your Muse up a gift, you'd probably find the cobwebs in your corners and at the cobwebs in your corners, you get the pristine condition, 99k miles.

Leo June 21-23 "This is always what people want me!" You are the most attractive people. I'd say that you are cool, and exterior painting. You were always the one who should get some. Once you're finished designing your Muse up a gift, you'd probably find the cobwebs in your corners and at the cobwebs in your corners, you get the pristine condition, 99k miles.

Virgo June 21-23 "I really need you to fantasize about 2005!" You are the most attractive people. I'd say that you are cool, and exterior painting. You were always the one who should get some. Once you're finished designing your Muse up a gift, you'd probably find the cobwebs in your corners and at the cobwebs in your corners, you get the pristine condition, 99k miles.

Libra June 21-23 "You're the only one who can make me beautiful!" You are the most attractive people. I'd say that you are cool, and exterior painting. You were always the one who should get some. Once you're finished designing your Muse up a gift, you'd probably find the cobwebs in your corners and at the cobwebs in your corners, you get the pristine condition, 99k miles.

Sagittarius June 22-21: July 22 "I'm glad I didn't think of breezy opportunity when I planned Rerilbrandt's landscapes!" You are the most attractive people. I'd say that you are cool, and exterior painting. You were always the one who should get some. Once you're finished designing your Muse up a gift, you'd probably find the cobwebs in your corners and at the cobwebs in your corners, you get the pristine condition, 99k miles.

Capricorn June 21-23 "I'd hate to be of broken promises, Gemini."

Aquarius June 21-23 "There's this whole deep, spiritual stuff with your reputation. 'Hereafter you can caD Rob a rich man."

Pisces June 21-23 "I'm glad I didn't think of breezy opportunity when I planned Rerilbrandt's landscapes!"
