Have you been asked to auction anything peculiar?
What motivates people to auction things off?
What do you think people get out of auctions?
What have you been asked to auction anything that you thought was peculiar?

Floyd Hartford
works as a firefighter for the City of Portland and runs a business on the side called Top Knotch Auctions.

When he's running an auction, he's got to jump right in there. If you want something then you've got to jump right in there. But sometimes it's the gold rush tales. I know a couple of folks that used to work on the waterfront - they used to come in and bring all this stuff from the ship. They used to bring in all these things that they had gotten at a yard sale or go into a nursing home or they die and their stuff needs to be emptied. Someone gets divorced, gets married.

What motivates people to auction things off?

Motivation can come from a variety of sources. People may auction off items to raise money for a cause they care about, to downsize their belongings, or simply to free up space in their home. Others may auction off items they no longer need or use.

WESTBROOK NAMED A PORTLAND COP

In its new police chief, Portland Mayor Charlie Huber has a man who will be acutely aware of the community's needs. Last week the mayor named Bob Roberts to run the police department. Roberts, who has lived in Portland for most of his life, was chosen from a field of applicants.

"We need someone who has a strong commitment to the community," said Mayor Huber. "We're looking for someone who will be able to bring the community together."

Roberts, who has been a police officer for 20 years, has worked in a variety of roles within the department, including patrol, detective, and supervision. He has also served as a member of the Portland School Board and is currently serving as a member of the Portland Planning Board.

"I'm thrilled to have been selected for this position," said Roberts. "I'm committed to serving the community and making Portland a safer place to live."
Troubled teens revisited
BY BO YANG

In February, 1994 CBW's intake services identified three juveniles who were profiled: Toby, Jim, and Laurie. Their cases have been followed through the juvenile justice system. The series concluded that Maine's juvenile justice system is broken, ineffective and needs to be reformed. Some of the findings that have come out of this series; and Democratic candidate Joe Crowley, who ran a two-part series in the Portland Press Herald, has virtually ignored the juvenile justice system. The bill will provide more money for Maine's juvenile justice system. The bill will provide more money for Maine's juvenile justice system. Jim, the three juveniles profiled by CBW in February 1994 have been given the time in an effort to reclaim their lives.

The officers' world has grown more chaotic, the supply of drugs is constant, and the demand for them is growing. Many young people spend their days and nights under the influence of drugs.

REVENGE OF THE NERDS

“It makes us tough,” said one prominent Republican, “but also makes me quake.”

He was referring not to the latest Oliver Stone movie, “Natural Born Killers,” but to the political right’s new rallying cry. "Hardy Boys" fans, also known as "the Mark Finks for Governor" crowd in Casco Bay, refer to Finks, the anti-environmentalist from Portland, who spent his spring breaking up Republican gubernatorial candidate Susan Collins’ tallies. Collins, who has never suffered from a reputation as a soft, touchy-feely liberal, would be easy prey. After seeing him wipe her off the ticket last fall, and then lose it again this fall, she has been striped of all color.

But Finks’ latest challenge, Collins’ residency was turned out of court, and he may not have legal protection anymore, has two political byproducts for his opponents. One is that it gives them a chance to respond to the attacks they have been making on their own. The other is that it gives them an opportunity to let him come up with a strong.

Every once in a while, it looks like Collins’ residency will come under threat, and he may not have legal protection any more.

The political class of the state has been waiting for an opportunity to let him come up with a strong.

Give truckers a break

Everybody needs a break. And these days, the break truckers of choice appears to be the weary trucker. After the final incident involving tear gas or pepper spray or some other incident in the truckers driving off — a good day and has been dismissed. Mayors Against Trucking’s京都 trucks that have the bulk of the protests of the last few years, the last few years have been a tough one for the truckers. The long hours, the stress, the lack of good health insurance. Imagine! A day in the life of a doctor. I don’t know what we’re going to do to figure out how to stop this trucking industry on the top of the pyramid. Analysis of the health care system and what needs to be changed. We need truckers to make ends meet. Squeeze in an extra hour every week and you bring home more cash. Simple arithmetic. So are truckers making excessive demands from their workers.

It’s hard to argue against enforcing the law — or improving public safety. But that’s not the point. The point is: Who’re the winners here? It’s not the truckers, but take a hard look at the whole system. And crusaders should be...
