There's more to Katahdin than just good cookin', there's Michelle's martinis...

For those who argue that there's no particular skill involved in mixing drinks,
I can only wonder why people would crawl over broken glass for one of Michelle's martinis at Katahdin — now there's a bartender!

Now there's a martini!

AN OPEN LETTER TO CITIZENS CONCERNED

About Maine's Environment

Dear citizen:

As you know, one of the hottest issues in Maine today is the current controversy over siting the new Home Depot in the Katahdin area.

In support of the Katahdin region, I am writing to encourage everyone who cares about the environment to participate in the upcoming public hearing on the project.

I believe that it is vital to ensure that this decision is made with the best possible information and input from all stakeholders.

Thank you for your attention to this important issue.

Sincerely,

[Signature]

A CONVERSATION WITH HOLLIS MCLAUGHLIN

"I was born and raised here in Portland. I'll never leave."

Vegan and alcoholics are two people that make for an ideal employee. John and Mary Kenny of Kenny's Ye Olde Pancake Shoppe on Congress Street have found such an individual, Hollis Mclaughlin.

Mclaughlin, 40, has been working for the Kennys for 24 years this Nov. 15. His duties include clearing and setting tables, putting water, cleaning the kitchen and sweeping the floors. During his employment at Kenny's, Mclaughlin has taken only three days of vacation, and has called in sick only twice. "I'm saving up my vacation time so I can go to Florida. I want to go to Disney World," said Mclaughlin. "My sister brought her kids there and they all loved it. I'm sure I'd like it."

How did you get this job?

I just came in and applied one day. John told me to come in and start the next day. I'm starting right. I know about the people. I used to work at Splendid's Restaurant for two years. They gave me vacation and I was there when they put a padlock on the door.

What do you like best about your job?

I like doing the dishes and setting tables. I like being out front so I can see the people. I enjoy the people so they come in and enjoy it here. That's who I've been here so long. I enjoy the people. They're real friends. I've been here ever since I started.

How long have you been an artist?

Since I was 7 years old. I just started scribbling and decided that I really like to sketch things.

Heritage House gives Maine girls in trouble with the law a place to call home.

DAD KOELKEN

April 1, 1996

Heritage House is part of a major change in how the Department of Community Services (DCS) treats young offenders. Rather than warehousing all youthful offenders at the Youth Center, the prison system has begun to use the MTC to hold only violent and chronic offenders. Some of the girls at the Youth Center will be sent to the new facility in an effort to get into the community and get away from the problems that led them to the Youth Center in the first place.

Heritage House is a new residential treatment program that began three years ago in the community. The program was designed to work in conjunction with the existing juvenile justice system. The program provides a supportive environment for at-risk youth who have been involved in the justice system. The program is designed to help girls develop the skills they need to succeed in the community.

The program is run by a staff of trained professionals who work closely with each girl to help her develop the skills she needs to succeed in the community. The girls are encouraged to participate in a variety of activities, including educational programs, vocational training, and community service. The program is designed to help girls develop the skills they need to succeed in the community.

Zeenahobic

Elizabeth Cooke, a former Bemidji and Owings High School English teacher who was in yuabor and teachers writing at the University of Maine Farnsworth, has just published a new small, illustrated portrait of one of the most influential women in all American literature.

Edith Wharton's novel, "The Age of Innocence," is based on the life of Leila Johnston, who spent her childhood in the Bowery and then moved to New York to become a popular actress.

The novel tells the story of her fast life and tragic end. Cooke's book, "Zeenahobic," is a poignant exploration of the challenges faced by women in the 19th century and the resilience of those who struggled to survive.

A Tree grows in Boston Much like you and me, Santemico is the Boston quartet Tree, among the hottest bands to emerge from Portland. Unlike many other main­ town bands that offer creatively loud guitars, bad attitudes and not much more, Tree actually sounds just like its songs, white strolling on mother gamey surf and not much more. The band's latest CD, "Dreaming of the American Dream" gets the job done, has enough good songs and socially conscious lyrics to hold your interest even if you're not headbanging.

As of Tree's need for too much of the same old sound, Tree has a less pOpular sound, but enough related sounds. Founded by counterparts to Leaf, Hovis and Lumberjack, who have

Ah, the Golden Age

Many more years now, doubting Gen Xers, retired at last from their McDonald’s greasy spoon jobs, will sit around Florida coffeehouses reminiscing about the 90s as the Golden Age of television. Remember all those shows that made your parents drool? The Golden Age of the World Wide Web. In fact, they’ll sound like Baby Boomers rhapsodizing about the 50s as the Golden Age of the World Wide Web. Last week a firm called CyberCash launched a system that allows Web publishers to charge online subscribers for text articles or nudie pictures as you cruise along. From 6:30-8 pm. Cost: $15 per session. 774-2403.

E-mail me, you bastard

I used to see any cool ideas and sending them off to editors, hoping that they might take pity on the serfs tilling the fields and hire me to write some stuff. Yeah, it’s the glorious world of freelance writing. Usually I’d write up an essay, and send it off to an editor; then that editor would hate my ass, and I’d have to try my luck with a new one.

Now, I can do anything electronically. Usually I’d write up an essay, and send it off to a pub. That meant it went into an editor’s e-mail box about one second later. I was still working on something, but somehow it wouldn’t have to take my essay for a response. At the pub, it usually took 90 days.

Of course, there’s nothing I can do or control anymore. I’m not working on something, but somehow it wouldn’t have to take my essay for a response. At the public, it usually took 90 days.
