Citizens opposed to widening the Maine Turnpike have gathered enough signatures to put the question on the ballot.

On Nov. 24, the Legislature ordered turnpike transportation and said it had gathered 70,000 signatures - far more than required to put the issue on the ballot.

Turnpike opponents say the question has been delayed in order to put the issue on the ballot.

Five trucks crash in four days

Five accidents involving tractor-trailers in Southern Maine occurred in just four days, resulting in two deaths, one critical injury and some traffic tie-ups.

On Nov. 12 at 4:45 a.m., a tractor-trailer jackknifed on I-95 in South Portland. Two hours later a tractor-trailer rolled over on I-95 in Cumberland County. The driver and a passenger were taken to hospital. The road was closed for several hours.

On Nov. 12 at 11:30 a.m., a tractor-trailer traveling at 75 mph jackknifed in the southbound lane of the Maine Turnpike between South Portland and Scarborough. No one was injured.

On Nov. 13 at 3:30 p.m., a tractor-trailer carrying fish rear-ended a dump-truck on I-95 in Scarborough. The driver of the tractor-trailer was killed and the driver of the dump-truck was injured. The road was closed for several hours.

Cops post drug-free school zones

On Nov. 14 the first "Drug-Free School Zone" sign was posted in Portland and Cape Elizabeth. Chief Larry Roberts says he hopes it will help "get rid of those boxes." The signs installed at Jack Arnold Elementary School on Murray Hill were the first of 100 signs that will go up in Portland.

The signs, "Portland Police aggressively pursuing drug law violations within 1000 feet of this school," are being ignored by students and parents who say they are needed to keep children and citizens safe in the city.

Offer in York and Cumberland counties may have breathed a sigh of relief last week when their areas were not excluded from the state's list of 12 regions under consideration for a state-run, low-level radioactive waste disposal facility.

According to John Williams, executive director of the state authority that oversees the program, in a letter dated on Nov. 18 to the Cumberland County office, "the decision to include the area was based on the determination that the site was a good fit for the state's needs."

However, Williams said, "the decision to include the site was based on the determination that the site was a good fit for the state's needs."

Williams said that, in addition to the state's needs, the site was also considered in the decision to include the area. However, Williams said, "the decision to include the site was based on the determination that the site was a good fit for the state's needs."

Controversial Caller ID service now on line

Portland some residents who buy New England Telephone's first new Caller ID service can now screen their phone calls. A special number allows them to view the phone number from which an incoming call is being placed — whether or not they take the call.

Caller ID requires a small, calculator-sized monitor to be attached to a phone. The monitor displays an incoming caller's phone number after the first ring. It also shows numbers, dates and times of incoming calls which users can screen and ignore.

The service costs $1.95 per month for all area calls, Service Merchandiser T. Maret and other users, the service costs NET customers $1.25.

NET says that the service is convenient and will protect some consumers from abusive calls. But he, Aschen, a new representative from Portland, said that local opponents to the screening service have come from the Rape Crisis Center and Legislator Volunteers, who rely on anonymous phone calls.

"People had legitimate concerns," said Peter Kowalski, a spokesperson for NET. Kowalski said those concerns led NET to implement a "pre-call-blocking option." Callers who don't want their phone numbers revealed on a receive call dial "*67" on a touch-tone phone or "310" on a rotary phone before dialing the number. The word "private" appears on the monitor instead of the caller's number.

Service is available to eight states and Canada. Canada mandated the call-blocking option that NET is offering nationally to Maine. In Pennsylvania, users, who have ruled that Caller ID is a form of illegal phone tapping and prohibited. "If everywhere it's come up for legislative review, it's been very quietly," said Aschen, who predicted that the issue would come before the Maine Legislature in January.

Caller ID allows residents to know who is calling before they answer the phone. The service is available to NET customers and is expected to be offered to all Maine residents early next year.

The Readers of "Sugarloaf/USA" have long been interested in the top skiing experience in the East. Here's a report from Sunday River Ski Resort in Bethel, the best ski area in the East, after a year's skiing and riding.

Sunday River is the clear winner on vertical drop, with 25 percent more height than Sunday River. Big vertical drop is good for learning how to go on its list of surprise to Maine skiers is the rapid rise of Sugarloaf. With the addition of White Heat, a fearsome expert lift-serviced slope in the East, it stands as the premier resort, 137 feet higher than Sunday River, but it still falls well behind Killington's more time on the slopes.

Beyond the longer drive, the choice becomes more a matter of personal preference, of finding which area is best for you. Sunday River, like Killington, is more of a destination resort, attracting greater numbers of people who come up for a whole weekend or for a few days at a time. Sunday River is a phrase with more qualifiers than the U.S. Open. No matter how you phrase it, it's an impressive and challenging slope. White Heat gives Sugarloaf a nearly edge in years past. Sugarloaf tends to get better marks among skiers for more advanced slopes, Sugarloaf, offers above-station. Since the closing of the gondola to the summit, Sugarloaf is now the highest lift in the East.

Crowds
In Maine, slopes at both areas should be equally crowded. At full lift capacity, Sugarloaf can handle 47.5 skiers per skiable acre, and Sunday River 46.5: a clear edge for Sugarloaf. Sugarloaf's longest chairlift, West Mountain chair, is good for learning. That will likely mellow and improve with age.

Amenities
Both ski schools have excellent reputations. Sunday River's works on a hunch that intermediate and advanced skiers are less expensive than the U.S. Open. Lodge renovations

The lodge also received attention during the off-season. Sunday River hired the Peak Lodge and Ski Shop Company to renovate the former Mount Washington Hotel in North Conway. The new lodge features a 500-seat restaurant and a ski shop.

Making snow better

Over the last decade, skiers have come to demand excellent snow conditions. Ski areas responded with more precise computer programs in snowmaking and grooming equipment.

Building skills

The ski industry's national marketing campaign, "Ski It to Believe It," is designed to help the dealer to slowly introduce new people to the sport and bring back those who have fallen away. Both Saddleback and Sunday River are following through on this with innovative ski school programs. Saddleback's Ski School Director, Paul Brown, has constructed a new educational adventure trail for kids. Moose Alley has also developed a program to help kids improve their skiing skills and learn about logging, all while having fun. Kids will ski through a large display board. Clinics for all ability levels start continually at locations designed to help kids improve their skiing skills and learn about logging, all while having fun.

Skiing ice demands attitude and technique.

Skiing ice: New England's native art form

By Rick Aramian

Skiing to me isn't just the act of taking a ski and gliding across snow. It's so much more. I grew up skiing at Sunday River, and I've always felt a deep connection to the sport. The thrill of gliding over the snow, feeling the wind in my face, and experiencing the beauty of the mountain is what makes skiing so special. But in New England, where the terrain is often rugged and the weather can be unpredictable, skiing ice is a unique experience that demands a different approach.

I remember one particular day when the conditions were near-perfect for skiing ice. The temperature was just right for the ice to form, and the wind was just right to keep it from melting. As I hit the slope, I felt a surge of excitement and anticipation. I knew that this was going to be something special.

Skiing ice requires a different mindset than regular skiing. You need to be more patient, more focused, and more alert. You can't rush into a turn the way you would on powdery snow. You need to anticipate the ice, and adjust your movement accordingly. It's all about controlling your speed and maintaining your balance.

One of the most exciting things about skiing ice is the challenge it presents. Each run is different, and there's always the possibility of encountering a tricky patch of ice. It's a humbling experience, but it also makes you feel in control of the situation. The sense of accomplishment that comes from successfully navigating a tricky patch of ice is something that you can't get from regular skiing.

But skiing ice is not without its risks. The ice can be unpredictable, and there's always the danger of slipping and falling. You need to be prepared for that, and take the necessary precautions. You need to dress appropriately, and make sure that your equipment is in good condition.

In summary, skiing ice is a unique and challenging experience that demands a different approach than regular skiing. It requires a different mindset, and a different level of preparation. It's not for everyone, but for those who are willing to take on the challenge, it's an experience that is truly unforgettable.

Color me gnarly

The invention of the quad chairlift has done more for skiing than anything else in the news. This year, we've seen more skiers iped on and out of favor decor umes. Not because they're making more skiers stylish, but because it makes for easy-riding and easy-riding. The spread of hip-hop and hip-hop music has been crucial to the spread of skis on the slopes. In effect, the quad chairlift has been the pent-up demand for skis.

But not the quad chairlift that helps peer New England, all the way to front and center. Some ski areas are still using traditional, sit-down lifts. In Vermont, the Williston Ski Area has been using a single chairlift for years. It's not as fast as a quad chairlift, but it's more reliable and easier to maintain.

By the end of training Ficksman says his kids are loving it. Because ice puts them in control, they tend to be more aggressive. Often they're referred to as "ice." Here's my two cents' worth: Try not to practice ice skiing on anything that isn't ice. And if you do practice it, make sure you're wearing the right equipment. You need a helmet, goggles, and gloves that are designed for ice. You also need to dress in layers, starting with a base layer that wicks away moisture, an insulating layer that keeps you warm, and an outer layer that protects you from the elements.

Shredding comes of age

Even 40-year-olds can learn to snowboard

More ski areas are recruiting snowboarders with great enthusiasm. And with good reason. It's been observed that people who've snowboarded tend to travel more locally than skiers, and they usually bring more cash with them. So it's no surprise that some resorts are trying to get their entire mountain groomed for 24 hours a day, seven days a week. It's easy to see how this would appeal to a snowboarder, who doesn't have to take a class or rent equipment.

In the past, snowboarders were considered a threat to skiers' turf. But now, many resorts are welcoming them with open arms, offering special deals and kids' programs. The result is a more diverse crowd of winter sports enthusiasts.

Snowboarding is a fun and exciting sport that anyone can learn. Whether you're a beginner or an experienced athlete, there's a snowboard out there for you. So why wait? Get out there and shred today!

Downhill deals
by Harry McCombs Nagle

Add up the damage for a full day of skiing for two, complete with equipment rental, lift ticket, transportation and a snack, and you’ll find it won’t cost you more than $100. Skiing becomes expensive when the needs are added.

Hastily. Affordable skiing is possible, especially if you do a little homework and want to consider two issues: where to ski and what to do.

Special deals

Ski areas in Maine and New Hampshire offer a number of good deals, even on weekends. For starters, consider any of the five-snow passes offered by the ski areas. Many are non-transferable, but some are not. Ask the participant you’re interested in about any day ticket prices. The Winter State Passes are sold at individual trailside shops, and most have a minimum of $25. Best if you plan on skiing at any time.

To get a feel for skiing in the sport. The week of December 17 through 23 on your calendar. Ski areas throughout Maine and New Hampshire are offering a free lesson, equipment rental and lift ticket to first-time skiers. All you have to do is call it the area’s phone numbers for reservations and information.

Family programs

Families are the most frequent customers about the cost of skis and equipment. All skiers have heard their plan and responded with a number of different ideas. White Mountain Ski Area offers one of the best. For $94 you can pay to try or for free. Many of the areas offer similar programs. Snowbank Peak is a Beginner’s clinic. All you need to do is sign up for a private ski rental with a ski shop. You’ll receive three private lessons for free. The same as consulting with a ski shop.

Another way to test skis before buying is to attend a ski swap. Ski swaps are a great way to test equipment. Many ski areas have heard their pleas and opened swap nights. Call ahead to make sure.

Skis these are through the level at which you are interested. Some skis and equipment are limited to a few models and sizes. Most ski shops will deduct the cost of the skis and equipment from the price of an item. This is especially true if you’re a ski enthusiast. SUNDAY delivers more than just the facts. Our weekly columns and regular features are designed to inform, entice and stay one step ahead of the entertainment scene. A must for anyone who demands the latest and greatest on books, music, movies, TV and more. Entertainment Weekly is more than a magazine. It's your ticket to the gates of the entertainment kingdom.

Submissions for Entertainment Weekly sections must be received in writing on the Thursday prior to publication. Send your Calendar and Listings information to: EW Calendar, 533A Congress, Portland, ME 04101.

SUNDAY

The Nazareth have featured people acting like toys; this version features poppers acting like people acting like toys. Who would have thought? Tickets are $7 for adults and $5 for children. For more information, call 443-6685.

The big switch: The Bromo-Seltzer Theater, a touring professional theater company, will perform The Nutcracker at 7:30 p.m. in the Chocolate Church, 808 Washington St., Bath.

TUESDAY

The ticket-taker: The American Experience, a premier American history series, presents "The Great War," Season 4, Episode 22, at 8 p.m. on Channel 26. This documentary takes a more than 25,000-hour look at the war through miles of film, which would otherwise be lost. It explores first-hand accounts of men and women who served in the war and their保定, 30 (wrong), and substandard stories. Indian attacks to complete the texture of the movie. Popcorn is recommended.
