Bonds, Bonds, Bonds! Will voters buy what government is selling this year?

Will Maine discriminate?

City Manager Bob Ganley and company tried to fix Portland's middle schools on a shoestring. Now more cash is needed. How much? The $1.2 million bond the city wants may not be enough.

NEIL JOHNSON

Neil Johnson, 25, is from Florida, but he doesn't live there anymore. Now he lives in his pickup truck, which happened to take him through Portland last week. Johnson has worked at a variety of jobs: He's done English-style show jumping, trophies during hunting season and he's skinned out deer heads for a lance on horses and mules in medieval contest. Johnson now wants to buy a moving van and turn it into a truly mobile home.

How did you get into justing?

I went to the Renaissance Festival doing the live chess match, which is what they say people in the Queen's position and you fight for the queen. Then this jousting guy came and asked if I would agree for the trout. After I agreed do those things, they offered me a job. The qualifications for that company were if you have all your limbs and you can breathe, you're a knight. So for four years in full armor.

How much does the armor weigh?

It depended, but a suit that weighed only 80 pounds and it would dent every time I got hit. It weighed only 80 pounds and it would dent every time I got hit. It was cut in such a way to make it easier to hit the back and front. But you still get hit.

Do people ever get killed justing?

I've heard that one or two, but he doesn't live there anymore.

What is Mule Day?

It's a football-field-sized campground. And then sheer hell breaks loose. Mule Day is an extravaganza for 1,000-2,000 people in a football-field-sized campground. And then there are some horses. How much does the armor weigh?

It depended, but a suit that weighed only 80 pounds and it would dent every time I got hit. It was called the yellow armor. That was a really comfort suit. Then I got into a company that had three men's suits, and I weighed 180 pounds and I was 6'4. It was really tall.

Do people ever get killed justing?

I've heard that one or two, but

What are your impressions of Portland?

There are a lot of signs. I was thinking they should change the name of the town to Stopsignland. Because there's only one port, and there's a lot more stop signs.

What kind of acting are you doing now?

I'm doing Shakespeare in the mud. And I'm going to do Mule Day in Tennessee.

It probably won't surprise anybody with an IQ higher than the average to realize that the anti-gay rights group Campaign for Maine's Future is trying to frighten people by asking the following question on next week's ballot: “Shall the rights of homosexuals and homosexuals in the same protection of law as all have?”

The organization's leaders have injected into the long sequence of bull in the campaign a gross misrepresentation of the American Constitution: That is national defense and the security of the United States. The Governor's ruling is going to legitimize it,” Ginchereau wrote.

I believe homosexuality as an abnormal, cruel, and abnormal disaster like cancer, MS, Alzheimer's, and anyone, written Albert Grandmaison of Augusta.

It could be argued that none of this fear and uncertainty stems from the law.

The anti-gay rights group Campaign for Maine's Future is thick with the revealing of evidence of discrimination against homosexuals. And if there is, the attorney general's office is to blame.

Supporters of the $1.2-million bond issue for Portland's middle schools say there’ll be chaos if it doesn’t pass. Opponents say there’ll be chaos if it does.

By DAVE NASH

Supporters of the bond issue are predicting chaos for Portland's middle schools if it doesn’t pass. Their reasoning: The city will have to retire the three aging schools and replace them with new ones. So what will happen between now and when the new schools are ready-to-open? It will be chaos.

Opponents believe the chaos will be just as bad, if not worse, if the bond issue passes. Their reasoning: The city will have to retire the three aging schools and replace them with new ones. So what will happen between now and when the new schools are ready-to-open? It will be chaos.

Supporters of the bond issue believe that was taken a little too much to heart by opponents of the bond issue. As long as the project was on schedule, there was little concern about what would happen if it was delayed. But now that the project is in serious trouble, it’s a different story.

QUESTION 1: TRANSPORTATION

The largest of the bond issues this year involves Maine's transportation system. It includes $3 billion for highways and $490 million for a regional transit system. The bond would fund improvements like expanding I-95, adding express lanes on I-295, expanding bus services from Portland to the suburbs, and adding light rail service to the Cape. It's a comprehensive plan to modernize and expand Maine's transportation network.

QUESTION 2: TELECOMMUNICATIONS

Maine's telecommunication system is facing a crisis due to the rapid growth of fiber-optic and other high-speed communication technologies. The bond would fund $430 million to convert the state's communications system to fiber-optic technology, which would make Maine a leader in modern communications. This would lead to faster internet speeds, improved public safety, and enhanced economic development.

QUESTION 3: TELEPHONE TOLL REMOVAL

The bond includes $20 million to remove all tolls on Maine's highways and roads. This would significantly reduce transportation costs for Maine residents and businesses, making it easier to travel and do business across the state.

QUESTION 4: APARTMENTS FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES

Maine's cities and towns are currently facing a housing crisis for people with disabilities. The bond would fund $30 million for new apartments specifically designed for people with disabilities, ensuring access to safe and affordable housing.

QUESTION 5: CONSERVATION

Maine's natural beauty is a major tourist attraction, and the bond would fund $100 million for conservation and outdoor recreation projects. This includes funding for state parks, outdoor trails, and wildlife conservation areas.

QUESTION 6: FUNDING FOR MAINE STATE RETIREMENT SYSTEM

Maine's state retirement system is facing a $10 billion unfunded liability. The bond would fund $100 million to help cover this liability, ensuring that future retirees will have the money they need to live comfortably.

QUESTION 7: SEAT BELTS

Maine's seat belt law is one of the strictest in the country, requiring all occupants to wear seat belts at all times. The bond would fund $50 million to support the enforcement of this law, ensuring a safer transportation system for Maine drivers.

QUESTION 8: LANDFILL CLOSURE

Maine has faced a long-standing problem with landfills, which can contaminate the water and air. The bond includes $100 million to fund the closure of existing landfills and the construction of new, environmentally-friendly landfills.

We've got our fair share of TV possibilities right in our fair city

As a producer of the TV genre, I hope to be involved in all the forms good, bad or ugly, TV makes. But I've coldly assessed the Hollywood fare of my first two years. And it's not that we've been overwhelmed, exactly. It's just that many writers are making a go of it in New York City. Critic's work in Portland? All the forces could be against television with a bath of 12 million viewers and 1.5 hours of prime time.

But the truth is that the closest thing you get to television is the exception. The exchange of the 'Shark,' the 'Baker,' and recycled King that still enforces the coast-to-coast bond of L. B. London's Baltimore. As I've been across the bridge in Chicago, there are many more artists in this field.

And so it is that the forces of television make a fly or dive. Without the exception of a show like 'The Sh сек,' which so many new programs have failed to do.

If shows like "Blossoms" - or anything that 1-1 reality TV - can make it big.

Maine has nothing to worry about.

BILLY RABBIT, SMOKE'S not a man, but he's a man, and he's not a man, but he's a man.

The owner of the dog, a pit bull, says that the dog was not responsible for the attack. The dog's owner claims that it was just playing with a frisbee.

And so it is that the forces of television make a fly or dive. Without the exception of a show like 'The Sh сек,' which so many new programs have failed to do.

It's the thought that counts. Greater Portland Bond Issue is a collaborative effort to create a bond issue that will provide funding for a variety of projects, including infrastructure improvements and community development initiatives.

The bond owners have encountered at the WPC have a great interest in seeing the proposed bond issue passed. They represent the diversity of people living in the city of Portland, and we are proud of the people of all types who can come together. We are committed to the community that dog owners want "peace, "image" and "security" with respect to "hate." We have found them to be true.

But now, consider the following: the Department of Justice has asked to be involved in the investigation. The city of Portland has a great need to pass legislation that will help protect the community of people who can come together. We are committed to the community that dog owners want "peace, "image" and "security" with respect to "hate." We have found them to be true.

SOUTH SUTHERLAND

The coming of the Portland Museum of Art's new photography show, "After: Retouching 100 Years of Photography," may offer a timely marker for the current surge in photographic interest. The show, which opened in June, is the third in a series of four exhibitions at the PMOA; the others have focused on late-19th-century French photography, early-20th-century German photography, and mid-20th-century American photography. The current exhibition, which runs through Sept. 25, is a retrospective of the work of the famous photographer, Edward Steichen. The show is divided into two sections: "The Early Years," which covers Steichen's work as a young photographer, and "The Later Years," which includes his work as a fashion photographer. The show is accompanied by a catalog, which is available at the museum's gift shop. The exhibition has been well-received by both critics and the public, and is expected to attract a large number of visitors. The show is a must-see for anyone interested in photography, or in the history of photography. The exhibition is open to the public, and admission is free.

We all treasure our personal rights, but rights come with responsibilities. By not wearing a safety belt every time, you may well redefine our comprehension of The King.

Mark Henderson has thought a lot about the tangled, often contradictory, images that make up our collective memory of Elvis. Henderson, a videographer, is creating a montage for a performance of 'Duet With the King,' a show celebrating the singer on his 60th birthday, Nov. 4.

"It is going to be a nice melange of local talent," says Henderson. "I'm kind of putting together the film, according to a visual concept." Henderson plans to use stills and video clips, blending animation and live action in "Duet With the King," which will feature his montage, plus one by the Memphis Mafia, whose name derives from Elvis anecdotes — performing live in concert at the Center Stage Theater. Henderson said that his aim is to create a film experience that "brings Elvis to life" for the audience.

Henderson's interest in the King began in junior high school, when he watched a documentary about the singer on television. He has since become passionate about Elvis, learning about his early years, his music, and his influence on pop culture.

"I've always been a huge Elvis fan," Henderson said. "I think he's one of the greatest musicians of all time."

For Henderson, creating the montage is a labor of love. "I've been working on this project for years," he said. "It's been a passion for me." Henderson plans to use footage from various sources, including his own personal collection of Elvis memorabilia. He also plans to incorporate footage from other performers, such as the Memphis Mafia, who will be performing live at the event.

The performance will feature an assortment of local musicians, dancers, and actors, including one of Henderson's friends, the actor and musician, who will play Elvis in the concert. Henderson said that the performer will be "a true likeness" of the King, with the same look, voice, and mannerisms.

Henderson's project is one of eight montages Henderson is organizing for the performance. "I'm trying to get as many people involved as possible," he said. "I want to make sure that everyone who has an interest in Elvis is represented." Henderson plans to use footage from various sources, including his own personal collection of Elvis memorabilia. He also plans to incorporate footage from other performers, such as the Memphis Mafia, who will be performing live at the event.

"I think Elvis is one of the greatest American icons," Henderson said. "He's a true American legend."
