A CONVERSATION WITH
JOHN HAWKINS-DURGIN &
DESIRÉE AND PETER LELAND

"I DON'T REALLY APPLY
"STAR TREK" TO EVERYDAY LIFE. I JUST
APPLY EVERYDAY LIFE TO EVERYDAY LIFE AND
HOPE IT COMES OUT." —
JOHN HAWKINS-
DURGIN

John Hawkins-Durgin of Lewiston (center) and Desiree and Peter Leland of Both have been going to Star Trek conventions for years. Between the three of them, they’ve accumulated just about everything.
Trekkie—postcards, Christmas ornaments, signed pictures of the “Voyager.”” "Next Generation” crew, you name it. Hawkins-Durgin (at the Enterprise), and Leland (at the Klingon Federation) attended a recent convention at the Marriott in South Portland.
They’d never seen before.

When Star Trek do you like better — the original or the "Next Generation"?
John: I like the older one because it shows more action. They seem to get around and talk on the "Next Generation" all the time.

Peter: The "Next Generation" has a better story line.
The original was good, of course, because of the time it was made and everything. I don’t think society was quite as ready for the show as it is now. Especially with the way they were dealing with social issues through the episodes. We have the same social issues these days, but they’re much more open and easier to deal with.

If Captain Kirk and Captain Picard were to have an all-out battle without the help of electronic weapons, who would you win?
Desiree: I’d go.
Peter: Picard.

Would you go into space?
Desiree: I’d do it in a heartbeat. I’ll have the means,
I’ll go.

Peter: I’d have the medicine for it.

Do you believe there’s life in outer space?
Desiree: There’s always the possibility. We haven’t been able to prove there isn’t, but we haven’t been able to prove there is. You never know.

John: Captain Kirk would win because he’s more hands-on. I’d kick the pants out of Picard.

Would you go into space?
Desiree: I’d do it in a heartbeat. I’ll have the means,
I’d go.

Peter: I’d have the medicine for it.

The drive for an elected mayor — Portland needs to become The city could testify to this in January, when it proposed a controversial downtown development project that has raised the ire of some residents.But supporters of the proposal argue it is necessary to revitalize the area and bring in new businesses.

The mayor, on the other hand, is a bit of a mystery. While some residents laud the mayor for his energetic approach, others feel he is too distant from the community.

NOT QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT

The city manager, "the disaster," said the city council was not in favor of the proposed budget. The manager said that the city council would have to decide on the budget, but the manager did not specify when the city council would meet to discuss the budget. The manager also said that the city council would have to address the issue of funding for the city's parks. The manager said that the city council had not yet made a decision on the budget, but that they would meet soon to discuss it.

Father knows best

S.S. Knoblt and Sarah Hourihan in ART's "The Tempest"

Prospero—always meditating on the good old days, as "The Tempest," the annual swashbuckler at the Kresge Theatre, Portland, is Shakespeare's cheapest father who knows best, mixing magic and guile to manipulate minds and hearts on his Mediterranean island. ART's production abounds with wit, warmth and wisdom, and it eschews the text but doesn't leave Shakespeare's romance intact. Everything matters around Prospero (S.S. Knoblt), the play's wise and caring teacher. He holds the audience while he diabolically plots against his innocent brother, the Duke of Milan. Heרים begins with the arrival of Prospero and his sister, the sorceress Sycorax, who is devastatingly beautiful and professionally successful. Their subsequent battle of wits sets the stage for the rest of the play, which is a series of brilliant, well-conceived scenes that keep the audience on the edge of their seats. The performances are superb, with Michael Monahan and Sarah Hourihan as Prospero and his sister, Sycorax, respectively. Their化学 of power and magic is mesmerizing, and the audience is drawn into the story with them. The set design is simple yet effective, with a large, empty stage that is perfect for the troupe's razzle-dazzle stunts. The costumes are gorgeous, with Prospero dressed in a flowing white robe and Sycorax in a flowing blue one. The lighting is also excellent, with a variety of colors and effects that enhance the mood of the play. Overall, "The Tempest" is a masterful production that is sure to please audiences of all ages. 7:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. 20 CASCO BAY WEEKLY
Friday 8
Affordable art: If the price tags at the Portland Museum of Art these days are a bit much for your paycheck, just make the appointment you can't keep and make sure that you really badly want to look at "The Age of Enlightenment" at the Portland Museum of Art, 125 Cumberland Ave., Monday through Friday, 9 a.m.-10 p.m. 780-5483.

Saturday 9
Location: LSM showcase ORIGINAL ONE ACT PLAY in in-Studio WORKSHOP. Sunday, 11 a.m. - 4 p.m. Locations: LSM, 410 Congress St. in Portland and 172-4334 in Freeport. This year's event features a new play every month, where each of these productions is chosen by the Portland community. For more information or to set up a time to visit, call 775-1234 or visit LSM's website.

Sunday 10
Waving nagotiska: Kids running around with ice cream cones driving down your street — the very things you're supposed to avoid. But kids are kids, and that's the beauty of cheerleading. Cheerleaders perform at the Portland Museum of Art, 125 Cumberland Ave., Saturday, 5-7 p.m. Show runs through Jan. 9. Call 780-5483 or 799-1421 for more information.

Wednesday 13
Finger-picking, the folk populartion of many audiences: Stephen Wade's BANJO DANCING includes the song "The Fourteenth Annual Separation Mountain Song." Dance, Politics: Convent and Arts and Crafts. Check out 11:00. "Another thing I do deep American love." Wade's music show involves storytelling and music to interpret what Wade himself calls "archetypal religions of the Americas." The show runs with the Portland Symphony Orchestra at Portland State University, 215 Foye Ave., at 7:50 p.m. Dec. 22. It will be a special event. 715-2020. 780-5483.

Thursday 14
Say "parenthood:" With all the talk these days about the deterioration of the family, people are coming to terms with the negative aspects of the "old" family. When did they lose their family, with room, dad, and mom? The "old" family can't even do this anymore. Wade's one-man show "The Forty-Eighth Annual Squatters" is scheduled for the Portland Museum of Art, 125 Cumberland Ave., Sunday, 7-9 p.m. 705-1800.

Friday 15
Magic show: The magic has begun in fly-overs. The geologist's Christmas tree is in Monument Square. His flock of birds is in the sky. You know what else? It's the Portland Symphony Orchestra's MAGIC OF CHRISTMAS CONCERT. The Portland Symphony Orchestra, with special guest, the Portland Children's Chorus, will present traditional Christmas selections, featuring vocalists and orchestra. The Portland Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Conductor John Williams, with special guest, the Portland Children's Chorus, under the direction of garbage Cany. For information, call 799-1421. 799-1420.

A perfect Christmas gift for someone you love.

Maine's Web page, one year on Maine's state Web page is one year on. Since the state's Internet address was given to the public on July 1, 1994, it has become the largest, most-comprehensive online information source in the state.

At its core, the Web page provides a comprehensive listing of public land resources, including Maine's state forests. The site also provides links to information about Maine's state parks, national forests, and other public lands.

The site also includes a directory of Maine's state agencies, which can be searched by agency name, topic, or location. The directory includes information about each agency's mission, services, and contact information.

In addition to providing information about Maine's natural resources and state agencies, the site also includes links to other useful resources, such as weather and traffic information, and a search engine for finding specific information on the Web.

The Maine Web page is a valuable resource for anyone interested in learning more about Maine and its natural resources. It is a testament to the power of the Internet to provide information and connect people in new and innovative ways.

Smooth sledding

Bach and Connie Jones don't know how they ever lived without their dogs - all nine of them. Bach, a computer systems engineer, and Connie, a chemist, have spent 30 years together, and they have a team of top-notch sled dogs that keep them active year-round.

Bach and Connie have been involved in mushing for almost 20 years. They started with a small group of dogs and have since grown to a team of nine. They have been competitive mushers, competing in a variety of races, including the Iditarod and the Canadian Championship.

"The dogs have to have enough brains to do the thinking necessary," says Bach. "They are very intelligent and they love to work." The dogs are trained to pull the sleds and navigate through the snow, and they are very responsive to Bach and Connie's commands.

Bach and Connie have also imported a trump card for the '95-'96 season. They have added a new member to their team - a dog called "Pilot." Pilot is a talented and driven dog that has quickly become a key member of the team. "We have rigged their pickup truck with travel kennels and we have a large barn that we use for training," says Connie. "We have a lot of space to play and train."}

Eight Chinooks are just barely enough for Portland's premier mushing family

In the "Can-Am" in Fort Kent, where more than 100 teams competed, 25 dogs were working as a team. And nine are held in Bangor, Laramie, and Cheyenne in one popular breed, the Chinook, for a total of 25 dogs. But the Joneses have a team of nine, and they are all full-blooded Chinooks.

"The dogs have to be strong and have stamina," says Bach. "They have to be able to run for long distances and be able to handle the cold weather." The Joneses have a special kind of people to work with their dogs, and they are very involved in the sport. They have competed in many races, including the Iditarod and the Canadian Championship.

"It takes a special kind of person to work with these dogs," says Bach. "They are very strong and powerful, and they have to be fed well." The dogs are trained to pull the sleds and navigate through the snow, and they are very responsive to Bach and Connie's commands.

Coming Soon To A Redhook Brewery Near You

Redhook ESB is an authentic hand-crafted ale that truly deserves to be called Extra Special Bitter. Its body, distinctive flavor is a perfect balance between the rich smoothness of caramel malt and the zesty tang of premium Tettnang hops. Redhook ales are now brewed in Seattle, Washington, but west year, we'll be brewing them at our new brewery in Portsmouth. Until then, you'll find Redhook ESB at selected outlets throughout the area. Try it, and let us know what you think.
