LENTEN SERVICES

April 14 (10:00 A.M.) - Palm Sunday Service. Sermon topic will be “The Day who comes”.
April 16 (7:30 P.M.) - Maundy Thursday Communion Service
April 21 (8:00 A.M.) - Easter Services Chapel Service
April 21 (10:00 A.M.) - Easter Morning Service. Sermon topic will be "Christ Triumphant".

Great care, study, and preparation have been expended in preparing these services for our Lenten meditation. It is the wish and prayer of the pastor that through the worship and prayer of this time of the year our heart and spirits shall be strengthened and brought nearer to Christ. May our springing be reborn again this Easter to a greater power than we have ever known and the spirit of Christ who rose triumphant from the tomb again enter every heart and his will and love make us as one with him and one another.

MYF NEWS

The Intermediate and Senior MYF have been extremely active during the past month and are continuing to grow in activity and numbers. Both groups were hosts to 26 youth from the Clark Memorial Church of Portland. The visiting MYF were taken on a tour of the island fortifications and viewed the harbor and open sea from the artillery observation posts that rise over 100 feet. A supper luncheon followed in the visitors’ honor, which there was an activity and game period. The day’s activities were concluded by a worship service in the church sanctuary conducted by an officer of each of the two groups. Both the Senior and the Intermediate MYF were invited to the First Methodist Church in So. Portland where they were entertained by the local MYF group. Following the afternoon activities a worship service was held and the sermon was delivered by Rev. Davis of the local church.

BUILDING REPORT

March-April

The Chairman of the Building Committee wishes to say that there has been some splendid assistance in putting up ceiling tile, plaster board, insulation, and wiring within the building. The following persons have been very faithful in working in the building program: Mr. Alonzo Foss, Mr. Robert Swear, Mr. Cyril Hill, Mr. Samuel Horvath, and Mr. Raymond Joy. These men have been great many hours at night and on Saturdays and Sundays. A great debt of thanks is owed to every one of them.

The weather is getting warmer so we will be able to paint the exterior. All the families who have volunteered to help will be receiving a call anytime now.

Lew M. Keenan
Chairman

CHURCH SCHOOL

The Church School has been most active during the past month and has lost one of its most valuable workers, Mr. Arthur Roberts the Church School Supt. has left the island to accept a new position in Ohio. On his last Sunday with the Church School Mr. Roberts was presented with a fine pair of pencils by Mr. Henry Adams in behalf of the members of the Sunday School, “For the present the Supt. will be absent, but a permanent successor can be obtained.” In addition to Mr. Roberts’ departure there is a great need for additional teachers in the Church school and interested persons should contact Mr. Davis.

Conference Note

The Annual Conference of the Methodist Church in Maine will be held this year in the Piscataquis Methodist Church at Waterville, Maine from Wednesday, May 23rd to Sunday, May 28th.
Biggest Tanker Arrives In Port

The Anna, the 710-toot Liberian supertanker, arrived in Portland Harbor yesterday. The ship arrived from Puerto La Cruz, Venezuela, to test the new pipeline pier which can accommodate such big ships. The tanker carried 187,767 barrels of crude oil—the largest shipmen in the city's history.

Playground Children To Have City Hall Program Thursday

The "Children's Hour" will come to city hall auditorium at 3 o'clock Thursday when children from the Portland playgrounds will dance and sing to music played on the Kotzschmar Memorial Organ.

John E. Pay, municipal organist, will play to amuse 500 children—those who will come from all the city's own playgrounds—and to accompany them for songs and dances on stage which they have learned during the summer play.

Douglas Matter of Park Street Church, Boston, whose playing is well-known to radio audiences, will be at the console at 3:15 p.m. Tuesday evening, to open the fourth week of the Twilight Program. John T. Warrick, a student at Curtis Institute at Philadelphia, also attended by Crisis Herman Kotzschmar Curtis, head of the city's organ, will play for the third time Wednesday, and Bernard Pilet, organist, at St. Peter's and Paul's Church, Lewiston, one of the city's frequent guest soloists, will play Friday evening.

The concerts are given free.
BUILDING NOTES

The Building Committee is very pleased to report that Mr. Franklin K. Pierce has presented the Church with a "Look." In other words, new front doors for which we are very grateful, for which we wish to extend to Mr. Pierce many thanks for a big improvement. The doors have been installed painted black to harmonize with the trim on the "Annex." We have had a number of compliments on this, in fact, have not had any complaints which is a pretty good sign most everyone likes the change. Pierce has been very ill, but we are glad to report he is sitting up a lot as this goes to press and hope he will continue to gain every day.

One of the questions at present is: are they so long completing the new building? When someone asks a question just ask that person how free labor they have given this project and we have faith to believe they will answer - none.

The Church has been very fortunate to have a few men who have given of their labor unstintingly while a great many have offered their services, but in the time comes to use them most of us have an alibi that they have to do something or they have something to do around the house, etc.

The next problem is money. Yes money. We had the money our troubles would over and we could complete this building pronto, but confidentially, we have about $1,000 at this writing. If we could only collect the amount due in pledges to date we could accomplish a lot deal more. However, speaking of pledges reminds us that next month comes the first pledge and the building committee expects to put on another drive in the hope we can raise enough to complete the job this year. Please give us the support we need now.

Thank You - The Building Committee

Outing Notes

The Campout at Sebago State Park was a great success for all concerned. The Pastor and nine boys arrived Friday noon and left Saturday afternoon. The weather was excellent and warm enough for swimming in the lake. During the night "visitors" arrived to increase the excitement. They were raccoons and an owl and both were looking for food. The boys had to prepare their own camp sites and food. A valuable lesson was learned by some, "He who eats like a king from his rations the first day will eat like a pauper the second." The Campout was planned to develop interest in scouting among the Island boys and a second trip is planned for the near future.
IF you want sea, sand and surf, you don’t have to go far from Portland’s environs to get it. You can take your water ocean-chill or lake-warm. You can bask in the sun in an ocean cove or a lakeshore.

Through The Day With The White Elephant Table

T.B.M.: (Center) The trait in white elephants is heavy as Mrs. Montgomery tends a young customer interested in scoring, Mrs. Aragon, lobster assistant, sells a painting off the wall and other fair-goers inspect such items as a canister vacuum cleaner (35c), beads (15c) and leather purse (75c). From Soldier's Lodge To

The battleship Iowa, largest of 60 warships to be mothballed in a Navy economy cut, back in the summer of 1943 she sidewise Soldier's Lodge in Hussey Sound between Peaks and Long Island. It was a war secret until 1953 when the Navy unwrapped the details. The new battleship then was off one of her shakedown trips, even before she joined the Atlantic fleet. Books made a long groove in her sleek hull five feet above the keel. She was drydocked in Boston for repairs. Her signing a captain, received a letter of reprimand. Soldier's Lodge subsequently was drilled and blasted out. (AP Wirephoto)
Gov. Muskie Sets Stage For Truce In Lobster War

Governor Muskie has stepped into the lobster war with the kind of calm, well-balanced leadership the crisis called for.

Careful not to inject himself unduly into a dispute where he might find himself treading on shaky legal ground, he nevertheless recognizes the obligations of his office and is ready to make his services available.

Specifically he suggests a fact-finding board to look into all angles of the problem to determine if the industry is overstocked and putting down prices, which has caused a work stoppage among fishermen.

His proposal has the double merit of looking toward an immediate settlement of the controversy between fishermen and dealers and long-range planning to soften if not eliminate the season that brings the greatest loss of life in the industry.

One of the problems is the presence of a specific proposal. The fact-finding board suggested by the governor looks like the one best way of bringing order out of chaos.

The other is the emergence of the governor as a focal point for settlement. He is in a unique position to bring disputants together to help them compromise in the best interests of the economy.

Governor Muskie has acted in the highest tradition of his office. If fishermen and dealers will respond to his proposals with quick action and show a willingness to cooperate for the good of all, they will be doing themselves a favor.

Falmouth Youth Finds Steamboating Fun But Doubts If It Has Much Of A Future

BY KENNETH W. BERRY
Staff Writer

Steamboating is interesting "but there’s not much future in it today," says a Bates college senior now nearing the end of his summer employment on the waters of Casco Bay.

William L. Taylor of Falmouth is engineer on the Casco Bay lines steamer Sabino, last active steam powered savings boat along the coast of Maine and followed the only one east of Boston.

Taylor is engineer of the Sabino because he likes it. "It seems as if a steam engine has more personality than a Diesel," he says.

The 23-year-old youth plans to take graduate work at Bates this fall, after he graduates next June.

"THAT MIGHT give me two or three more years in the Sabino’s engine room," he is found with a smile that showed he wouldn’t complain.

In an age when Diesels on land and sea are in and the air is bad becoming the backbone of the country’s transportation it is unusual to see a young man whose interest is in the older form of power.

"I was first interested in steam locomotives," he said, "but it turned out that they have gone from the scene. Then I esp. fell for both the Casco Bay lines in 1924. I married a deck-hand on the Gunnet, freighter. But was fascinated by the Sabino because she was a steamboat."

"THE SABINO SAILS at 10 a.m. daily. It makes a nonstop run to Bailey Island then two hours more there. Back in Portland at 4 the steamers turn for Casco Bay, Landine, Peaks Island, and return about 8 a.m. on the day’s work except for putting the steam plant to bed for the night.

"I have to coal up every 15 or 20 minutes, while we are at sea, so get plenty of time to see where we are going. And on this boat we really see a lot of interesting people. The captain keeps a clean and efficient boat and it’s a pleasure to work with him. It isn’t just rich but it’s regular work and it’s pleasant."

Taylor said as he gave a last look at the engine before starting the day’s run.

"WHENEVER we are in Portland we meet a lot of interesting people. The captain keeps a clean and efficient boat and it’s a pleasure to work with him. It isn’t just rich but it’s regular work and it’s pleasant."

Taylor said as he gave a last look at the engine before starting the day’s run.

HE’S TAKEN TIME to learn something of the history of the three-year-old boat. He knows she was formerly the Tourist and ran on the Kennebec River. The big infant bell by which veteran Capt. Earl Smoody gave directions to the waiting room has a history, too. It came from the front of Harry E. Thibeau, milliner and tailor who killed Stanford White, noted architect on the roof garden at Madison Square Garden June 23, 1902. That yacht was built up at a south Portland shipyard.

Taylor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Taylor, Gray Rd., Falmouth, and the late William A. Taylor, who was district superintendent in the U.S. Postal Transportation Service. The family moved to Maine in 1903 from Paterson, N.J., when the father was transferred here.

The Sabino’s engineer is making history in Bates. He is considering the ministry on returning at his life work. But in the meantime, when he isn’t in college, he’s happy to be flying the waters of Casco Bay.

WALTER CLARK, Peaks Island, was the Sabino’s engineer and Taylor used to slip away on his lunch hour to fire the steam boiler for Clark. The engineer is also the fireman. Then the machinery ran smoothly in a dense fog and was uncorked. The Sabino, a sloop boat, was put into regular service.

Clark, who had been schoolteacher in the Taylor for two summers on the car and handling of the Sabino’s power plant, went to the Gunnet.

Taylor took over the steamer’s engine room after a week of checking out with Clark. The Sabino was put onto the Bailey Island all-day tour this summer, and “we’ve been doing business” the Falmouth youth said.

"People come to Portland just to ride the Sabino because of her steam power," he said. "Many way they prefer it to Diesel power because it is smoother. Some except they go to sleep. And if it happens they are cold going down the bay, they like to move to the enclosed lower deck where the boilers provide warmth."

YOUNGSTERS have over the engine room call watching the two-cylinder Pain compound steam engine as it runs the propeller shaft and drives the boat along. And they watch as carefully every move of the young engineer.

The trip is Bailey Island and back takes up about two-thirds of a ton of coal.

Taylor, a hammer thrower on the Bates College track team, and a third place winner in the Steeplechase meet, doesn’t consider that’s much work.

Nor does he think coal cocking too much work, each morning is such a task although the hammers are replenished by muskets and a shovel paid. The boat can be kept cleaner that way.

Business hold four tons but cocking is done every morning. It takes three men about 30 minutes.

Watch Taylor in the engine room preparing for the day’s trip and you’ll see he really loves that old engine. He checks everything carefully, makes sure every oil and grease cup is filled and working properly, balancs the engine alone to draw the condensation from the cylinders and feeds the coal carefully to get up the 150 pounds of steam in the modern boiler.

Old Bucksport Tannery Reopens

By Staff Photographer Morrison

Bucksport — The centenarian Robert Tannery Company, shut down six months ago, sold to a new owner and will be reopened, Simmons said.

The new owner, R.D. Babb, Jr. and William A. Michael of Salem, Massachusetts, will continue the tannery and operate it as the Desmond Tannery, producing white leather for the shoe manufacturing industry.

The tannery was purchased with assistance from O’Connor, Department of Administration, and the buyer has arranged to move the business to an undisclosed location.

R.D. Babb, Jr. and William A. Michael are looking forward to expanding the business and had the following message written on one of the slips:

OLDSTER BUILDS FLOOR

In Church Without Charge

By Bruce Roberts

Elderly eight years old, but still not knowing the meaning of retirement is Alonso P. Foss, of Peaks Island. Since his early days, he has been active in church activities, although he has been an active Brackett member since coming to the island 40 years ago. His membership is still with Augusta's Court Street Free Baptist Church.

For the last two years, Martin, a contractor for its annual foundation and framing with members' elected to complete interior finish work to save money, Alonso has been directing the past year such volunteers as Cyril D. Hill, Lewis M. Watson, and others. The project is expected to be completed in late April or May. The appeal is $55; 26 cents per dollar. Alonso also has helped with the kitchen's work, built kitchen cupboards, shelves, mops, helped with painting, and a variety of tasks. Often, he has put in a full day's work, for him, that's from 8 a.m. until he leaves, which is usually around 2 or 3 p.m. "School hours," he calls it. His enthusiasm has kept things humming.

Satisfied with the telephone in the judge's chambers of Portland's Municipal Court. It has been moved to the nearby domain of Frank T. W. a hall by 30 feet one floor in the auditorium of the new annex of the island's Brackett Memorial Church. With him it has been a labor of love. Not a penny would he accept all this. He's seen in recent years.

Labor as a carpenter, he has just completed a 30 by 40-foot oak floor in the auditorium of the new annex of the island's Brackett Memorial Church. He's seen in recent years. Local Breaks

Burlington and Dorchester, Mass., with some amount from the Portland Variety Club, contributed to one of the three breaks reported to police yesterday.

Provost John H. Scozawer said the break was made between 8 and 10 a.m. when his clerk, James Montgomery, left to go to a house in the 29 Custom House Wharf st. to pick up some papers. The Robinson's account registered the 7:10 a.m. entry of the break. The restored window and robotic alarm appeared undisturbed. The stolen cash included $350 in bills and $50 in coins.

The city and state police will assist the detectives in their search for the thieves.

She Stands Unashamed
To Face A World Unafraid

"... Being mentally retarded does not mean you have to face the fact with a dark cloud of gloom. It is something best to be ashamed of, but we have to face the fact that we have mothers and fathers, and they have to face it along with us."

Speaking was a 22-year-old young lady, who is definitely not ashamed of the fact that she is a pupil at the Prime Training School in South Portland. Nearly 18 months since the former Portland High School pupil arrived at the Prime School, Marie Cataldo Floyd feels it makes progress towards the clarity of thought and meaning in her life.

Diana of Mrs. Grace MacNathan, Portland, Marie can distinguish.

When Marie tried to earn her living, it was all the more confusing. She had the vague idea of becoming a nurse's aide at Mercy Hospital. She reported there for a few days, and then it was all over. She worked as a secretary for one day.

"So I decided (to) take mother around the house," Marie explains. "I did that for two years before I called up the Prime School to ask for a job."

Marie was different, Marie, however, was a difficult sort of retarded student. She was the kind to look for the advantage that being mentally retarded has. She was well-adjusted, pleasant to be around, and ready to work with her problems within her abilities once pointed out to her.

She avoided frustration as much as possible, and sometimes it was a struggle to keep pace with her contemporaries.

In talking Mrs. Anne Pride, who heads the school, for a job, she obtained that— and instruction as well. She takes care of 10-year-old Barbara, Mrs. and Mrs. Austin pride's own retarded child, a job which has added its own new avenues of opportunity to Marie.

It is the little things, Mrs. Pride believes, that "gives you the place of normal within their own mental capability, that their condition, through brain lack or brain damage, can happen any time a city is torn."

On this note of mingled fear and respect the school is directed.
