Pick it up, Madeleine!

"The little transistor radio floated in the toilet, and Madeleine was the culprit. She leaned against the counter, rocking back and forth and whining at the top of her lungs. In that moment, I wanted nothing in the world so much as permission to slap her as hard as I could. There is exaggeration and there is rage.

I had long since crossed into the latter."

There's a lot of satisfaction in seeing a child who has never moved outside of his wheelchair be able to look down at somebody instead of looking up.

Riding To The Top is a 501-corporate agency that offers therapeutic horseback riding lessons to create Portland children and adults with disabilities. Sarah Bronson, 17, of Westbrook, is president of the agency's board of directors. Bronson and the group are currently on hand, but numbers expect to purchase a horse and start teaching again by April.

What kinds of people volunteer for Riding To The Top?

We have people who come with an interest in horses. We have people who come with experience working with disabled people. We have people who just want to volunteer.

The biggest thing is just being committed to bring them. Somebody, a child or an adult, is depending on them to be there. We try to get people to commit to a set time, so they develop a relationship with that person. And there are some physical requirements. They need to be able to walk for an hour, and try at times of two.

Do you remember the first person you taught?

The first person who just really clicked is in my mind was when I was volunteering in a riding program in North Carolina. It was a little girl with autism. The first thing I remember about her way that she really didn't want to get on the horse, and she couldn't talk at all, at least not while riding.

Even if you don't buy a Saturn, you'll think you did.

We put our used cars through the same whirlwind, 200-point inspection. But the day is for you! Saturns or not, this means paying attention to every detail, including you. We give the same prompt, courteous treatment whether you're looking for something small or something big. And with a 24-hour hotline, (800) 657-3793, we're here to help you look.

Even if you don't buy a Saturn, you'll think you did.

Tired of the quickness of life in a crowded movie theater, but Devo never watching the foodshare production about choosing the pan's gobbledygooknik? It's called "Devil's Playground," and it might want to shift slightly toward the main event.

The co-sponsor for the Democratic nomination is James Bowers (possible campaign song: "What'll of Washington the one in Maine," an acronym, former state representative and current party treasurer. That he is almost completely unknown is cause for concern. That he has just one term in Augusta before being defeated for reelection is a worry. That he may be by far the only candidate foolish enough to take on independent Gov. Angus King is a reasonable reason for trepidation over the long-term viability of this campaign. That he is mad to want a run is a larger fact to accept.

Well, almost. Those who are still trying to reach safety by walking in a huddle, not by sixes and sevens, should be ashamed. They are the alternative to Bowers seems to be Washington state Rep. Bill Lemke, a party regular who's known the legislator well a lifetime in the state house. Lemke, an historian, has also devoted himself to teach causes as creating a single-chamber legislature, establishing the office of lieutenant governor and opposing the Bugee money stamp because Moosy's eyes. Bowers has never been known to support Lemke and he's damn near running. Lemke said he's thinking about it. Democratic state representative from Port­land, a former state Rep. Henry Joy (R-The Lost World) and former state education commissioner and unsuccessful legislative candidate Leo Martin, are also engaged in a mad battle to win.

In an effort to prevent that from happening, leaders of a new area compost and recycling education group are seeking an increase in the fee they charge for composting services provided to residents. The group plans to use the increased fees to expand their services and to hire additional staff.

The group, which is called Columbia County Organic Waste Management (CCOM), has been working on developing a sustainable waste management system for the county. To do this, they have identified three main areas of focus: composting, recycling, and waste reduction.

Composting is a process where organic waste is converted into a nutrient-rich soil conditioner. According to the group, composting helps reduce the amount of waste sent to landfills and provides a valuable resource for local farmers.

Recycling, on the other hand, involves sorting and recovering materials that can be reused or repurposed. By recycling, the group hopes to reduce the demand for new raw materials and conserve natural resources.

Waste reduction focuses on minimizing the amount of waste generated in the first place. The group encourages residents to reduce their consumption of single-use products and to use reusable alternatives whenever possible.

To finance these initiatives, the group has proposed increasing the fees they charge for composting services. They estimate that the fee increase will generate enough revenue to cover the cost of hiring additional staff and expanding the composting education program.

Members of the group believe that the increased fees are justified by the benefits they provide to the community. They argue that a sustainable waste management system is crucial for the health and well-being of the county, and that everyone should contribute to this effort.

The group is seeking feedback from the community on their proposed fee increase. They encourage residents to attend their upcoming meetings and to share their thoughts on how to improve the waste management system in Columbia County.

The group's next meeting will be held on the second Tuesday of every month at the local community center. For more information, visit their website or contact them directly.
Pick it up, Madeleine!

The men of several people in this story have been changed to protect their privacy.

Madeleine is completely deaf. She knows more sign than she lets on.

"Not!" she shouted. And added, "Not Alice! If you put your walker in my way, you'll knock it over!"

"Not!" I gently rocked from side to side. I could see no harm done, and I was determined to make it up to her.

"No, Madeline. Just a few minutes, I would choose Madeleine."

I thought to myself that if some mysterious force in the universe offered me the chance to change the course of events, I would choose Madeleine. She was a short block and a half from my house. I probably should have thought twice before taking his advice. I was so...completely astounded by the sight of Madeleine's ability, and I couldn't believe she was playing us all for fools.

Frank once declared that he'd never work with Madeleine, even if the agency quadrupled his pay and offered him vacations on demand. Considering this, I probably should have picked up the phone. I began assuming the role of active client. The idea of her physical harm was preposterous! But I guess I failed to see that vastness of the universe. Frank couldn't do it, she was too good at her job.

Frank's philosophy could be applied to all areas of our lives. Our own making that I didn't stop to think of...I chose the route of active client. I started asking questions, and I found a new source of energy on a more productive track.

Pick it up, Madeleine. One-up your max! Madeleine made to lose, then strength up and steal away. I felt just as instant flush of anger, and grabbed her wrist. Frank saw me.

"You're going to let her get away with the other, which is an engagement."

No excuse

The religious right has launched a campaign of misinformation about gay rights legislation, the law granting civil rights to gay men and lesbians. In brochures and newspaper columns, the anti-gay forces have trotted out a series of allegations against the measure. That these claims are patently false is of no concern to a group that claims its opposition to the law stems from religious dogma.

According to opponent's propaganda, Maine will open its doors to all manner of, er, uneducated populace and without a financial obligation. The measure is clear on exactly what religious groups need not obey the law.

Back to the back alley?

I am a 28-year-old nurse and I have had both my children in the hospital. I have had the absolute privilege of seeing both the beautiful and the tragic at this place of birth. Most people who live and work in hospitals take their jobs seriously. We are often the first to see death and disease; we also see love, new life and hope. We are privileged to care for people at their sickest, and we strive to see that they have the best possible care. No one, especially not a medical student, should know what it is like to hold a dead baby in your arms.

Some medical students who come here are not aware that the hospital where I work, Maine Medical Center, is a teaching hospital. Students come from all over the United States, and we work with them on rotation. This is a privilege and a responsibility.

The religious right will keep sending their thinly veiled messages to the mass media. They are banking on the fact that most people are not aware of the facts. Many of the arguments against the law are based on misinformation and fear. The religious right will use any means necessary to try to get their message out.

I personally do not believe that having a choice about whether or not to have an abortion is an infringement on the rights of others. I do believe that the government should not be involved in this decision. We are living in a society where we must respect each other's choices. People should have the right to choose what is best for them.

What about the teachers?

I was saddened to read the article on the situation in Portland's ESL program. The article was written by the author of an ESL program in Portland, OR. (I'm not sure which one, but I assume it was the one that the article is written about)

I wanted to add that the program is not without flaws. But the program has been effective in improving the education of many students. The ESL program is not only for immigrants, but also for native-born students who need help with English.

Ms. Cleek, I commend you for standing up for what you believe in, even if it goes against the majority. Your article is inspiring and I hope it will encourage others to speak out against injustice.

Canine logic

I just wanted to express my thoughts on the recent articles about dogs and their behavior. I am an animal lover and have had many pets throughout the years.

I think dogs are just as intelligent as humans and deserve to be treated with respect. They are loyal and loving creatures who bring joy to many people's lives. Dogs are also very trainable and can learn to do many different things.

It is unfair to judge all dogs based on the actions of a few. It is important to remember that each dog is an individual and should be treated as such. We should work towards understanding and improving the lives of all dogs, rather than focusing on the negative aspects.

I hope that my thoughts on this subject will be considered by others and that we can come together to create a better future for all dogs.

It's cold. It's gray. And, yes, we're supposed to be questioning what God is doing to the people here on Earth, knowing as we do the terrible things that happened during World War II — 75 years ago. But why are we talking about the weather, you might ask? Well, we're talking about the weather because it's cold and gray. "Gorillas aggressively pack with a touch of trash." That's what the drawers, let's see. Sporty Vivian and their music. It's a brave statement to make, but it's accurate. The music on Sporty Vivian's EP, "Finish! and Sweet!", is gorillas in the same vein as Lush — with two female singers who alternate the sugary high harmonies of their voices — especially on "Gold Floor." Sporty Vivian misses the mark on the aggressive end and string section, and, as for the touch of trash, the title track and "Gorilla" after brief diversions into the realm of thrashing drums. American Music Club

The Wall Street Journal has declared Americans to be "about the most exciting thing that's happened to popular music in decades." Which mostly proves why you shouldn't trust the Wall Street Journal. (Just kidding.) So what's the next best thing to a music magazine that's been around for decades? A band that's been around for decades and still manages to surprise and delight the crowds that follow them. The American Music Club is just that. With their signature sound of folk-infused rock, they've been entertaining fans for over 30 years. Their latest release, "Bested," is a testament to their enduring talent and raw appeal. Don't miss out on this chance to see a true American treasure live on stage.

Sportland

A midwinter night's dream

Now that we're heading into one of the most psychologically and spiritually challenging seasons of the calendar, it's fitting to look back to a time when the events of the day were celebrated with songs and stories of mystery and magic. The Sportland Winter Carnival, held annually in Portland, Maine, embodies the spirit of this time of year. With events like ice skating, snowboarding, and cross-country skiing, there's something for everyone to enjoy. So pack your warmest blankets and head to the Sportland Winter Carnival for a night of fun and festivities in the beautiful New England outdoors.

Portland City

On Valentine's Day, we celebrate the love that connects us all. Whether you're planning a romantic dinner for two or a festive party for all, there's something for everyone at the Portland City. Enjoy live music, delicious food, and company with friends and family. It's the perfect way to spend Valentine's Day in the heart of Maine.

Ah, Portland. How do we love thee? Let us count the ways.

It's time to vote for the Best of Portland, CBW's annual love fest, in which we celebrate all that is most wonderful about our town (and some of the things that aren't so wonderful, as well). So get out your writing utensils and fill out the categories you care about.

Confine your nominations to people and places within our coverage area (noughty Brunswick to Windham to Old Orchard Beach). If you see a place, we might use your comments when we write up the winners in our issue of March 12.

All entries must be in our hot little hands by 5 p.m. on Feb. 6. Vote early, but not often. Photocopied entries will not be accepted.

When most people think about Martial arts, they think of just the kicking, punching and violence portrayed on TV. However, Martial arts is so much more. It has been noted as the #1 activity for children by Sports Illustrated magazine because it develops superior concentration, a positive self image and confidence in a fun and safe environment.

Come see our program can do for you or our child today.

Because we want you to learn the truth about Martial arts, we are offering you a FREE MONTH OF CLASSES.
