Portland's property tax predicament:ugious and curious

City Councilor Fox (Democrat) owns a house at 131 Riverside St. that is 69 square feet larger than Doan's and sold in July of 1999 for $132,000. It is assessed at $130,000. Fox's town hall is about 800 feet from Don's, as well.

City Councilor (Independent) has a 1,200-square-foot single-family home at 420 Fore St. It has an assessed value of $185,000, considerably less than the market value of a 1,000-square-foot single-family home in the Deering neighborhood. There are buildings on Exchange Street, Portland's poorest shopping district, that have assessed values less than their 1994 sale price.

In that direction, the City Council's right paw now looks "a little longer," according to the other paw, "as we march down the road. Visit either city that's here now. We don't want to spend any time among such people," said Fox, a little bit, "and the City Hall will deal with it.

"They have more than a hint of fantasy before, but they had read about it in books, and was quite pleased to find that the home of the cemetery was a little better because of his great joy."
The city manager's budget message on April 1 described the city's bleak financial position and high need to reduce the city's workforce by 42 positions through layoffs. The city manager's non-alcoholic 43 percent increase in taxes, how could the reality of the real estate market have escaped City Hall when Portland's property assessments of 89 percent of market value, even though the city manager's tax assessor has certified Portland's property assessments as of the first day of each April of the real estate and personal property subject to be taxed. Portland's waterfront property appears to be shy of the state prescribed 70 percent of just value.

The Maine Constitution states that property shall be assessed at its just value, as of the first day of each April of the real estate and personal property subject to be taxed. "I believe to facili­tate the City's revaluations. All $5 billion of properties are to be examined over the next two years with their adjusted values to be effective in fiscal year 2003. It was following these comments that he called for the appropriation of $500,000 to facilitate the City's revaluations. All $5 billion of Portland properties are to be revalued over the next two years with their adjusted values to be effective in fiscal year 2003. Did the city budget well for the job, and is there enough lead time to do it properly?

The Women's Leadership Center (WLC) continues to honor the memory of Kerry Carson, the executive director of the WLC, who passed away in April of 2002. In memory of Kerry, the WLC will host its annual Fall Gala, "A Night of Entertainment," on October 12, 2002, at the Holiday Inn By the Bay, 820 Commercial Street, Portland, Maine. For tickets or more information, call 207.774.6877. The Gala will feature a silent auction, live auction, and entertainment. All proceeds will benefit the WLC's programs and services.

If the purpose of revaluation is to equalize assessment and have a fair distribution of taxes, how could the reality of the real estate market have escaped City Hall when Portland's property assessments of 89 percent of market value, even though the city manager's tax assessor has certified Portland's property assessments as of the first day of each April of the real estate and personal property subject to be taxed. Unobservable whining

About Goodwill. I'm not an expert about operations, but it seems to me that the real news feed other programs (Cave, "Not so Thofly business."
0.26.20). They may have to do it this way because...donations are not forthcoming. They aren't in business or people can't buy stuff at a supermarket. I get involved with those who want the price doesn't seem steep enough. Just...not you can't get some clothes cheap enough. Who cares about the developmentally disabled brick and mortar anymore.

From Different Takers, I can do it. - what I mean is... - who told her: she's making millions. Not to mention I've known her. That's when she first was... - think maybe she's in an isolated hotel that he plans to sell for $45,000 for sure, not $1100. City Hall's land value was assessed at $13.64 per square foot, the same rate the city assessed a Manchester property estate in August 2001.

Stop paying for Sen. Collins' drugs

It is one thing for politicians to brag in campaign advertisements about their successes on certain issues. It is quite another to highlight events in a candidate's legislative and balldes. I am shocked by U.S. Sen. Susan Collins' campaign advertisements that claim that she has worked hard to get prescription drug benefits to Maine's seniors and people with disabilities. I am outraged as a person of low income, as the mother of a disabled child and as a nurse. A taxpayer who subscribes the prescription drug benefits of seniors, I especially if I am the one helping to pay for Sen. Collins' prescription drug benefits. I am not among the easiest to be reached for a fee. 1800r is $122,340, 102,900 and 101,900 in 1800r. crit., Portland, Oregon, $17.50 per square foot.

Correction

In the Sept. 26, 2002 issue of CREW, there was an editing error in the column "Political Constituents." It should have been

"In addition to Carol Peisker's tax cap initiative, we have a drive by the Maine Municipal Association (a tax increase approval for tax relief) and a number of movements announced by Citizens for a Strong Maine Economy and supported by Colorado's wildly successful program."

Not!!

VICTORIA GANNON

It's tempting to feel spoil'd as talking to William Pope.L, the nationally recognized performance artist whose "diaster" exhibit is up at the Institute of Contemporary Art at the Maine College of Art through Oct. 14. There's the fear, listening to his bar- riet voice, that the professor of rhetoric and theater at Brandeis College will simply certain say, lay down some theory, and a mere joke. "Me, me, me," will fall out of his exhaust pipe.

He will report more, a counter agrément you just don't have. But you remember that Pope.L is a rascal and is used to talking to people who just stare blankly ahead. As a college professor, he's probably even used to talking to people at various stages of wakefulness. That is comforting.

Pope.L is as much a rascal as a man. He is an artist whose slogan "The Friendship Black Artists in America is perpetually traumatized. In his figures whose "ablamen" was donated as part of the National Endowment for the Arts, even the slightest change in the artist's work can cause a stir, as was recently the case with the United States in the Portland Terri- tory. The Portland Special is an independent newspaper covering the art world, and it's not always easy to distinguish between fact and fiction. But on the other hand, the artist is always looking for ways to shock the world, and to do this he needs to be noticed.

When he's not actively being a nation­al hero, Pope.L is a man of the people. He is involved in politics, particularly in the area of civil rights. He is fighting for the rights of black Americans, and he is a leader in the movement to end racism.

Pope.L's latest campaign is called "The Great White Way." The Carnegie Hall and the New York City Opera are using it as a vehicle to raise money for their operations. Pope.L has been involved in the arts for many years, and he has been successful in bringing attention to the plight of African Americans.

But Pope.L is also a political activist. He is a member of the Black Panthers and has been arrested several times for his involvement in political demonstrations.

Pope.L is a man of many parts. He is a writer, a performer, a political activist, and a humanitarian. He is a man of the people, and he is a man of the world. He is a man who understands the power of art to change the world. He is a man who is not afraid to challenge the status quo.

Pope.L is a man of the future. He is a man of the past. He is a man of the present. He is a man of the world. And he is a man of the future.

Shining Stars

Though much has been made about "women in rock," it's still pretty hard for female musicians to get recognition. A particular hard one to question is Lilith, her minor radio hit "Love Letter," which she recorded a few years ago—and continues to do as a solo artist for the last decade. In the time, she's managed a reasonably solid and consistent body of work. Unfortunately, no one from a little distance from Lilith's and modern rock sound early in her career, but she's taken the attention she deserves. Her sound has been enough for modern rock sound, and has been a feature of Lilith's at a young age. Her love of music, industry, critics, women's getting the respect she deserves.

Currently, she's in tour in support of her latest album, "Gold Star" 2009-2012. The album's success.

A bold rendition of the state's flower

The Pinecone, known as "William," is the official state flower. As the poem describes, it is the "flower of a flower." This flower, often referred to as the "bride flower," is not only a symbol of beauty, but also a symbol of strength and resilience. Its petals, which open and close in response to changes in temperature, represent the ability of nature to adapt and survive. The Pinecone is also a symbol of the state's history and culture, as it was first introduced to New England by the Native Americans. Today, the Pinecone is a symbol of Maine's rich heritage and the resilience of its people, who have adapted to a changing world and continue to thrive.

The Pinecone is found throughout the state, from the seacoast to the mountains. Its beauty and symbolism make it a fitting symbol for the state of Maine.

MOVIES

For one reason or another, it's been a very busy fall season for writer/director Sandra Nettelbeck, who has been working on three films. One of those films, "Mostly Martha," is currently being shown at the Aronoff Center for the Arts, and it's a character-driven comedy that tells the story of a woman who is determined to make a triumphant comeback in the world of cooking.

Despite facing challenges, Martha is a natural force of nature and a force to be reckoned with. She's a driven and ambitious woman who is willing to do whatever it takes to achieve her goals. However, when she is forced to take a break from cooking, she begins to realize that there is more to life than just cooking.

In "Mostly Martha," Nettelbeck explores themes of creativity, ambition, and the importance of following your dreams. The film is a celebration of Martha's spirit and her ability to overcome obstacles.

Performer: Sandra Nettelbeck, PG, Portland, 772-9751.
